I. R. C. CONFERENCE

Bucknell University Junior College was privileged to send four delegates and one faculty adviser, Dr. Robert Nicholson, to the International Relations Clubs’ Conference held at Marywood College, Scranton, on November 17 and 18. The delegates returned with glowing reports of the conference. No definite place had been settled, it is true, but the delegates had the experience of being at a convention. They mingled with other delegates from various colleges in the Middle Atlantic States and in Canada and heard some impressive presentations of international affairs. They themselves had opportunities to stand up and voice their beliefs—to challenge and then again to be challenged. The conference, therefore, truly stimulating and thought-provoking.

The International Relations Club is one of the newer features on the campus this fall. It has joined the ranks of the many historic organizations of Bucknell, the Taber Literary Society, the Tote-Medics, the Thespian Society, the Purple and Gold, and Ski Club. The club, under the sponsorship of the Carnegie Endowment, has flourished mainly because of the enthusiastic efforts of college students and the cooperation of college faculty. They give their members knowledge and understanding of the nations of the world, their peoples, and our own relations to them. As the President of the Endowment has so well stated, "The purpose of the Carnegie Endowment is under no special pretense to win the confidence of public opinion. It is not to support exclusively any one view as to how best to treat the conditions which now prevail throughout the world, but to fix the attention of the students on those underlying principles on which the organization of international relations which must be agreed upon and put into action if a peaceful civilization is to continue."

THESPians HAVE CIRCUS PARTY

On Friday night, November 17, the Thespian Society gave its first party of the new year. Normally, such a party is given for the freshmen but because of the circus which was to arrive at the next day, the party was given for the sophomore, junior, and senior members of the club. The party was held at the house of Dr. Margaret Hughes, 1944, who is in the Littauer Research Institute at the Yale Medical School.

On Tuesday and Freday evening movies are held in the auditorium for those who are unable to attend. On Tuesday 7:00 A.M. and 5:30 P.M. Much music is performed by the students of the faculty who are only slightly affected. Everything is performed by the students, and the program includes a musical, a lecture, and a variety of comedic acts.

Another underground tunnel from the basement to the upper levels of the building is being built to enable the students to be transferred from one part of the building to another without being seen by the faculty. Speaking of which, Dr. Margaret Hughes is in the process of building a new wing to the auditorium.

The circus arrived on Monday night with the usual excitement that accompanies the arrival of a new show. The circus is held in the auditorium and the students are welcome to attend. There are several acts, including clowns, acrobats, and a group of circus workers who answer questions about the circus.

The Thespian Society is in charge of the event, and the program includes a variety of acts, including a musical, a lecture, and a variety of comedic acts. The program is performed by the students, and the program is well-received by the students and faculty.

PRE-MED CLUB TAKES TRIP TO RETREAT

On November 14, the members of the Pre-medical Physiology Club visited the medical institution at Retreat. The trip was held on the campus of a small town, on the outskirts of a large city. Although the weather was cold and the roads were slippery, the trip was still enjoyable. The members of the club had the opportunity to see the medical facilities of the institution and to learn more about the work of the medical professionals.

The Pre-medical Physiology Club is a group of students who are interested in pursuing a career in medicine. They meet weekly to discuss topics related to the field of medicine and to prepare for the Medical College Admission Test (MCAT).

Poetry Column

A perfect day tomorrow, God, please.
A day with just the right amount of breeze.
Let the sky be blue and bright.
And let the rainstorm come tonight.
A day that is golden sun
I know you can't please every one,
Please, God, let tomorrow be.
A day especially for me,
A perfect day tomorrow, God, please.
A day that is not too hot or cool,
When perfect weather is the rule.
Because tomorrow is a special day
When I am going far away.
So a perfect tomorrow, God, please.

By Dolores Matelski.

SOUNDS AT NIGHT

Abed within my city home
I hear the factories hum and groan.
The noise made by a passing car,
A whistle in a broken bar.
I hear the sirens screech and squeal,
A passing lady's tapping heels,
I hear the train rush 'round the bend—
These clashing noises never blend.

But through this sounds a little joy,
To a quiet-loving country neighbor,
I don't believe I'd sleep just right
Without these old familiar sounds at night.

By Dolores Matelski.

Bill Rozanski thought that one of the attendants was joking when he told him they wouldn't be able to get in. The attendant checked the cells for violent patients, but didn't lock the door. Indeed, they thought that he was just trying to make them laugh. Imagine their surprise after the door automatically closed behind him. There was no knob on the inside.

An other department at Retreat, the Oceania, is a new department. Here, under the guidance of a very capable instructor, those patients who are able to work are taught various handicrafts. Of exceptional interest was a tall, handsome, black-bearded man from this department. He was a talented artist who had the fortune to be the son of a Chinese mother and her child from the National Geographic Magazine. In addition, he had made several character studies and some fantastic paintings. His works are to be commented on, for when his work was praised, he immodestly agreed to sell only reproductions, not originals.

In this connection, we would like to try to inform you that on November 30, from 10:00 A.M. to 5:00 P.M. a Christmas sale is held in this department. Many articles will be on sale, including toys of every size and description; needlework, quilts, and many other items. This sale is a great opportunity for those who want to buy gifts for the holidays.

The Thespian production was called "The Miracle of Miss Nora Sanguliano," and it was directed by Mr. Richard Watson.

The show was held in the auditorium, and the students were very much impressed with the performance. The Thespian production was a huge success, and the audience was very happy with the performance.
While waiting for Inspiration to hit his muse, Steinman sat under a subject for a column, her reporters sat in the Beacon Room. Looking up from his pen, Steinman spotted Outside a World Lit. Class buzzed happily under the direction of the cat that had the peace shaved by wild, hysterical laughter issuing forth from the Beacon Room.

Those old Becons were certainly lulu’s! For instance, where was that #2 Student Column didn’t even bow at being bowling... that was a howl! In view of the fact that recently there has developed a decent-sized interest in bowling (hasn’t there, Elayne?) we are trying to get our worthy Ed to publish again. Please, dear Ed, and I promise to get my stuff in on my time from now on.

No sooner had we mumbled sidestepped from this Bowling Column, that it reappeared from the depths of Karl’s and Steinman’s quips... like this one: We see glass rolling pins have been added to Bucknell’s present collection. This will give more than one husband a pain in the neck. For more concerned was Ed to the King of Bantam’s column in this issue.

Last, but not least, we came across a bit of news under the column. We like it. The object of our affections is labeled Frustration, it is being written by the Editor-in-Chief of D. Albrecht’s writing of artistry. See what happens to faculty members after awhile? Anyhow, we have officially adopted Frustration as a member of the Beacon staff; and will loan him out to the rest of the students only during exam weeks.

We’ll get our out of the Beacon Room and see what’s on the campus. We’ll start with an 8 o’clock French class. After which we made our way over to the cafeteria for some of Mr. Goet’s brew. It wasn’t cold. As a matter of fact, that opened our eyes. We sat wide-eyed with amazement watching Mr. Goet in action. He shaved the breakfast that would do justice to Paul Bunyan. Lessear, there was no need for a watchman, who is the shush on to think of how many pieces of toast. Does chemistry do that even?

Anyway, we went over to the chem lab... on the theory that a BA student should at least absorb a smell of the sciences, and we got into a very involved conversation with Mr. Steinman on the management of perfumes and what it costs, etc. OUCH... all that money just for a name label to perfume the bottle, because, according to Mr. Steinman, the actual perfume costs very little in money to make.

At this point we are about to reveal a personal fact about Mr. Steinman. This fact is, his parents have been pleasing with us for silence, but why should we keep quiet? In Mr. Steinman’s case, anyone who speaks to us for possible future publication... so here goes...

Do you want that newly groomed look? Are you having difficulty taking notes because your hair falls into your eyes? Is your hair in a constant state of muss? Do you secretly envy Mr. Steinman’s smooth, well-groomed hair, that is becomingly arranged coiffure? You do? Well, use Poinsietta hair... Mr. Steinman does.

There.

Johanna, put down that filling case! Do you want to get that new Mr. Steinman’s "inconreet jerk knots"? Don’t I have enough trouble running around with frustration in my hair? Put down it, I tell you, NO, NO, not on my head!

(Ed. Note: The Column was so discussed.)

BUCKNELL BRIEFS

Gobble, Gobble, Gobble! Pardon us for talking turkey, but it’s the season.

We better quit this before some one knocks the stuffing out of us (and a awful way to treat our fill).

We were so happy for Janie when her male came through. It certainly shows there is still a great deal of munc of which is of Major importance.

We always knew Begets would make a good turkey. He certainly has the mug for it.

Miss Mack had a tough time trying to get a piece of turkey on the table. You should have taken an extra period, Jeanie.

If Edy Miller suddenly takes on that cornfed look, you know she has finally paid off a bet with me by eating an issue of the Buzz.

We understand the last trip that the Model Club took to Retreat was successful. In fact, every one was nuts about it.

We have a choice item about the Bucknell football team. We have to be puttable to kick out of B.U. 3.
