Another Building Given To College

Rev. Morgan Joins Faculty

The newest member of our English Department is Rev. David R. Morgan of the Allerton Methodist Church at Harvey's Lake. You may see him any day in the week teaching English Composition in Kirby 107.

Before coming here, Mr. Morgan obtained his A. B. at American University and taught in several schools about Wilkes-Barre, including the Wyoming Seminary. He is now doing graduate work at Bucknell for his Masters degree.

Mr. Morgan's hobbies include raising his three boys, stamp collecting and fishing. When asked his opinion of the Junior College, Mr. Morgan remarked that he enjoys teaching here more and more every day and that he likes the students very much.

[Editor's Note: Due to circumstances beyond our control, a picture of Rev. Morgan was not able to be obtained.]

MR. DISQUE RETURNS

Mr. Disque left Bucknell U. J. C. in June, 1941, to become a T-4 in the U. S. Army. He started out in anti-craft at Camp Stewart Georgia, and embarked with that group for Northern

MR. PUGH

Since October 15, 1945, the evening classes in Bacteriology at Bucknell University Junior College have been taught by congenial, cooperative Mr. Pugh.

In addition to teaching at Bucknell, Mr. Pugh is Director of the Laboratory of Public Health Work, Manager of the Kirby Health Center, Principal Health Officer of Wilkes-Barre, and Director of the Wilkes-Barre and Northeastern Branch of Health Laboratories in Pennsylvania.

A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, Mr. Pugh holds the Bachelor of Science degree in Chemistry. Having taught Bacteriology and Chemistry at the University of Pennsylvania in 1943, and obtained degrees in Quantitative Analysis and Chemistry.

DR. ORROK

This year Bucknell welcomes to its faculty Dr. Douglas H. Orrok, instructor in French and Spanish. Claiming Arlington, N. J., as his home town, Dr. Orrok was educated in the local schools there, Mercersberg Academy in Pennsylvania, Amherst College, and Columbia University. Recently, he taught at Texas Tech., Ouachita College in Arkansas, and Ecole McJannet in France.

Among his favorites, he lists skiing in Massachusetts, hunting in Texas, and—mushroom omelette! Dr. Orrok thinks Bucknell is "tops" and his opinion of Wilkes-Barre in that same category.

MR. WASILEWSKI

Coming to Bucknell after having taught mathematics for 20 years at Nanticoke High School, we have Mr. Stanley Wasilewski. It was at the University of Pittsburgh that Mr. Wasilewski received his B. S. in Electrical Engineering and at Bucknell University that he received his M. S. in Mathematics.

He spends his leisure time at home with his five children; in his workshop, or in his library. Teaching has always been something that gave Mr. Wasilewski great pleasure and doing it at Bucknell even adds to that pleasure, we are informed.

B. U. J. C. GRADUALLY ENLARGES

This year Bucknell has once again enlarged its campus. Another building has been given to the college by local philanthropists. This building, which is located at 134 South River Street, was given to the college by two men. These men are both members of the Board of Trustees, and have asked to have their names withheld. The new hall is yet without a name and is now being used as the offices for the Veterans' Administration Guidance Center, since Conyngham Hall is being used for laboratories and class rooms.

HUMAN NATURE AND THE PEACE

A Statement By Psychologists

Humanity's demand for peace leads us as students of human nature to assert pertinent and basic principles which should be considered in planning the peace. Neglect of them may result not only in new, but well-intentioned our political leaders may be.

1. War can be avoided: War is not born in men; it is built into men.
2. In planning for permanent peace, the coming generation should be the primary focus of attention.
3. Moral, national, and group leaders can, at moments of tension,

SPEAK TO PRE-MEDS

Reverend Beane discussed the importance of a close relationship between theology and medicine at the second meeting of the Pre-Medical Council in the Alumni Room on Wednesday, November 7.

"Medicine and surgery are not sufficient for the recovery of patients;" he said. "You must be able to do more. A person should not only have his health, but also his soul. Religion is as necessary as medicine." He stressed the importance of a balanced approach, where religious beliefs and personal values guide medical decisions.

"We must live together and work together to obtain a happy and useful life. We must study medicine and religion to cooperate together."

Reverend Beane saw such a program function successfully at a Boston hospital last summer. At this hospital, doctors, surgeons, and medical students studied social, economic, hereditary, and psychological phases which influenced the patients. They proved that through medical and spiritual guidance of such patients quicker (Continued on page 4)

Dr. Nicholson Discusses Britain's Foreign Policy During November

Great Britain's foreign policy in the post-war world may be summed up in the phrase "search for security." The recently concluded European war with its attendant political and economic costs has left Britain's security interests in a new light. It has been suggested that Britain is better equipped to meet the challenges of the future than ever before.

Are you surprised and pleased? We are very much. For some time, we have been dreaming of a bigger and better Beacon. However, the usual run of work, work, and more work has left us only time to dream. But, our staff has grown to unusual proportions and with a fair division of labor, we have succeeded in enlarging and bettering the Beacon.

There are new feature articles, representations from all Student Clubs and Organizations, also the Dormitory, more news on Student Activities, and for the information of the male population there will be a sports column in the near future. There is one thing we would like and that is to hear from you. This is your paper and your activities. If you have any suggestions about a column or any type of news you would like, just tell us about it, or if you're bashful, jot it down and drop it in the Beacon Office. We do our best for you and give your suggestions careful consideration.

Come on, you bucknellians, let's hear those criticisms and those suggestions; we mean those which usually start in the Lounges, the Cafeteria, or the Ping-Pong Room (and usually die there, too). Here's your chance. If it's worth telling, why we'll be waiting.

HAY-RISE

On Friday, November 9, many students could be seen hurrying to Chase. The time? 6:30. The object? A hay ride. Co-eds and young men alike wore jodhpurs or slacks. There were plenty of cars for the ride to Dallas. The idea was that no one could be left behind. The hay wagons were all tied to the same car through the maximum. After two wrong turns, we found ourselves in a small town.

Weekess Hall Entertains

Miss Sanguinoto and the women of Weekess Hall entertained several of the faculty and their wives at a buffet supper on Sunday evening, November 4. The theme was the first social event of the semester. Guests who attended were: Dr. and Mrs. Vora B. Hall, Miss Margaret Ann Hall, Mr. Orrok, Miss Fanny Orrok, Mr. Mason, Mr. Symons, Mrs. Symons, all of Wilkes-Barre, and Mrs. Maginness of Philadelphia. The planning and supervision of the meal was under the direction of Mrs. William Jarvis.

B. U. J. C. HOLDS LUNCHEON

On October 15, upperclassmen escorted their little sisters and brothers to an all-student luncheon held in the Great Room.
THANKSGIVING?

On November 22nd, the entire United States celebrated Thanksgiving. Turkey, cranberry sauce, pumpkin pie, and all the other traditional foods were again carried out. But, the greatest tradition, the one on which this country was founded, was it carried out? No. And why? Because Thanksgiving was too close to Christmas. Consequently, it was made a week earlier. Is there any common sense in such an argument, if it can be called one?

The colonists who survived that first hard winter were real Americans and we honor them for it. Therefore, since our land advocates free speech, worship, and press, the very thing these people fought and died for, why should we change the day of a national holiday, especially one which means as much to us as Thanksgiving?

If we believe in the ideals these first Americans set forth, we should celebrate Thanksgiving on the real day—their day.

SMALL TALK

By Small

Greetings, gals and guys, especially all you veterans—la la! I think all the new men should be labeled with a pin bearing either B. A. or B. A., or Ph.D. The von will stand for bachelor, the M. A. for married, and the Ph.D. for Practically Held down. I know one girl who sabbed a whole week trying to get a date.

Have you noticed the change that has come over “Howie” Dinsdale? You can hear him “Caroling” the heart discussions in the Reception Room about politics. The forum usually consists of Messrs. Riley, Kotsis, and Humanities.

ORCHIDS TO: Mr. Callahan on his reelection. The school is behind you 100 percent, Joe. Anyone who ever passed College Algebra will see what is the secret of your success.

The new French teacher for his terrific sense of humor.

SCALIONS TO: A few freshmen who weren’t men (or ladies) enough to go through with the initiation. In conclusion, I stop to hear you the story about the two horses who were discussing the next race at Hialeah when a dog interrupted, saying, “I am betting on Short Stop to Place.” “Ye gods,” shrieked the horse, “a dog that talks!”

ENGLISH FOR CHRIST!

By James Flynn

The Luzerne County Christian Endeavor Union is scheduled for forty-six years of service and fellowship. The Union’s convention was held in the Luzerne Christian Church at Wilkes-Barre. The convention featured various programs, including speeches, workshops, and worship services.

The theme of the convention was “Christ and World.” The emphasis was on the Christian’s role in responding to the needs of the world. The convention featured workshops on topics such as missions, evangelism, and community service.

The convention ended with a closing worship service, where participants reflected on the impact of their faith in shaping their lives and the world around them.

FROM THE GALLERY

By James Flynn

It certainly is wonderful to see so many new freshmen attending the convention. The enthusiasm of them is good sports, too, which was proved by the good-natured manner in which they took their initiations at the hands of the upperclassmen.

The first chemical laboratory period found Miss Dorothy Raub, one of Mr. Steimann’s assistants, busily engaged in soothing the burns of the Freshmen Chemists. Miss Raub’s comment on the whole affair was “I’ll bet Pre-Med could serve his internship here!”

The Halloween Dance proved to be an unusually revealing affair. There was there that N. S. (Nova Scotia) exhibited a new technique in the art of dancing. There were two unusual features of her exhibition, and both had a practical value in the crowded conditions that existed in the evening of the dance. The first feature was the unusually large gap between her and her partner which allowed other couples to promenade between them by leaving the tangled feet situation. The second was the “hand in the air” feature which gave the impression that the couple was picking apples rather than dancing.

I’ll never forget the surprised look on Dr. Nicholson’s face when he added to his plans a map of Europe which turned out to be an anatomy chart which had been strayed from Dr. Ward’s Zoo Lab.

WHAT THE BIG SISTER PLAN MEANT TO ME

About a week before school started, much to my delight, I received a very friendly letter from one I did not know. This letter contained my first knowledge of the addition of the Big Sister Plan to Bucknell. Upon my arrival at the school I was greeted by a basket of flowers and a card bearing the name of my Big Sister, Miss Louise Brennan.

Meet Louise Brennan, lovely daughter of our favorite cook, Mr. Brennan. Louise’s dream must be about six feet tall, with dark hair and eyes, a nice dancer, and no line. Most of the co-eds feel as she does. She likes to drink cokes with people who are friendly and natural and roots for Bucknell’s mighty basketball team. When Louise finishes college, she would like to take up Physical Therapy or some other related profession. We’re sure she’ll make a splendid one.

Pride of the engineers, Bob Wentz, claims his pet peevishness is B. A. ’s. (And what engineer’s isn’t.) He eats anything that won’t eat him.

THE CHORAL CLUB

The Choral Club held its first meeting of the year on Tuesday, October 23, at 12:00 in the music room. New officers were elected at this meeting. Miss Rosemary Zankel was re-elected president. Rosemary is a Sophomore and was president of the Choral Club during the summer semester.

Mr. Bruno Bujno was elected vice-president and Miss Jean Street secretary.

Miss Peggy Woolcock and Mr. Harold Lawrence are the new librarians and are also new students at Bucknell.

This year the choral group is one of the largest the club has ever had and under the able direction of Mr. Gies, it should prove to be one of the best.

PRE-MED ELECTIONS

At the first meeting of the Pre-Medical Club conducted on Tuesday, October 31, elections were held. Al Dervins succeeceeded R. Young as president. Dolores Vinesky was elected secretary-treasurer, while directors elected were Preston Sturdevant and Eugene Marshall.

President Dervins appointed Melvin Light as sergeant-at-arms and Daniel Williams to assist Mr. Light.

Plans to visit hospitals and medical institutions in Wyoming Valley were made. A series of lectures are being arranged.

THESPSIANS ELECT OFFICERS

At a recent meeting of the Thespians, the following officers were elected: Jean Machon, president; Gloria Farkas, vice-president; Phyllis Kirshner, secretary; and Betty Marlo, historian. The group also agreed to an invitation made by the university theater group to participate in their annual show.
Mr. Disque, professor of English Composition and German, addressed the faculty and students of Bucknell at the first assembly of the semester. His address, entitled "Our Obligations to Italy," was given on Monday, October 29, in the Presbyterian Church House. Having been connected with Army Intelligence in Italy, Mr. Disque was well qualified to speak on the subject. Mr. Disque stated that unless we guard our mistakes in Italy and correct them shortly, we may not have that better world we have been working so hard about so much. He went on to describe the hardships the Italian people are undergoing because of the crimes of their leaders, and so raised the question: "Do not the victors have an obligation to see this through?"

"There is a lack of realization that we are part of the world," Mr. Disque continued. "It is just as important now to cooperate during peace as we did during the war. To govern a foreign country, you must know the language; you must know the wealth; you must know the welfare; you must know the discipline.

The faculty and students are very sorry to hear that Mr. Faint is a patient at the Nesbit Memorial Hospital. Everyone misses his cheery smile in the office. A week ago I wrote to him. We are looking forward to seeing you back at your desk soon.

The "Personal Pledge" which follows is a testimony of each En- deaverer's promise to pray and work "For Christ and the Church."

"Trusting in the Lord Jesus Christ for strength, I promise Him that I will strive to do whatever He would have me do. I will make it the rule of my life to pray and read the Bible, to support the work and worship of my church, and to take my part in many of the students, as well as various members of the faculty. During the course of our conversation she informed me of the different rules and regulations of the college, as well as how to conduct oneself at the various social activities. After the tea I was personally conducted around the college campus. This first college friendship means a great deal to me because it has given me my first year right. This friendship is one that I will always cherish and remember.

—Kathryn Harvey.

ENGINEERING CLUB HOLDS WIEEIE ROAST
On Friday, November 2nd, the Engineering Club held their annual Roast at the Fairlea, in Beaumont. The night was clear and cool, and a light rain fell toward the end of the evening.

The night was highlighted by Joe Ruta's car being outflanked by a ditch, so the Reserves were called out. Between the women pushing and the help of a tow truck and three tanks, the car was finally given a new lease on life.

Mr. Hall's expert fire building and cooking helped to make the night a success. In the meantime, Mrs. Hall's pleasing personality helped to keep conversation alive. Mr. Richard's "silent" admiration of the quality of the food was appreciated. (Showing his bashful side, not speaking when his mouth was full.)

The majority of the crowd was content to relax around the fire. They were led in song by that genial "gentleman," Doug MacNeil.

After everyone satisfied his hunger, the party ended by mutual agreement and the various cars started treading their way home.

VETERANS SPEAK AT ASSEMBLY
Dr. Farley introduced two veterans and graduates of B. U. J. C. who spoke on the topic: "Can We Win With Our Allies and Our Enemies?"

The first was Robert Connelly, who was with the 17th Signal Corps of the First Army. He said that during the meeting discussions, the communica-tions were carried on by ultra high frequency radio on a boat in the channel. The equip-ment was newly received and is now worked between the corps and the army. Before the invasion they lived in Bristol, England. American guards were paid as much as British captains; so the Yanks were a social success with the British girls. The English girls just had a rigid chain control system. He believes the Labor Party will win the British elections because they promised the people reforms which the American soldiers had been calling for.

In France there was a great food problem; and Paris was not taken as soon as it could have been because facilities were not available to feed the population. Gangs would rob Army trucks for food to sell on the black market; but this was broken by the British. The women were paid to American money, and by investigat-ing the amount of money sent home by individual soldiers. We heard like the dirty cities and low standard of living.

In Germany, Mr. Connelly’s only contact was with German technicians because of the n-ternazionalization policy. The civi-lians were billed fed and clothed in other European countries he had seen. He visited Buchenwald a few days after it was lib-erated and said its horrors were as great as have been pictured. German civilians were forced to go through the camps to see what
FASHION HIGHLIGHTS

By BETTY NESBITT

The influx, invasion, or whatever you want to call it, of freshmen this term has given your reporter something new to talk about—so I’ll try and get right down to fashion facts.

Ladies first! Bernie Novick is really high jinks in that navy-blue plaid dress. With her hair in a big roll—like—Eleanor Jablonski wears a red-and-white sweater with tiny white chickens embroidered in it—Gloria Paczkowski strikes an informal note with black skirt and peasant blouse—Carolyn Jones has a casual, windown look when she dons her red-and-green plaid skirt and tan-man-tailed jacket—that orange jersey blouse with bishop sleeves worn by Betty Williams had sophistication with a capital “G.”

At the Women’s Tea last week Janie Wolkman looked as college and classic as possible, wearing her grey turtleneck dress with raglan sleeves. And she had a plain gold pin in the shape of a key to complete the costume. At the same affair, your reporter noticed Dolores Settich wearing a flowered aqua dress with matching handbag—also very nice. And Elizabeth Smith’s print dress with fuchsia trim was sophisticated and different—Madeleine Molitoris wore a jumper dress in the brilliant yellow with a red belted coat—Shirley Stockey, who was in charge of the tea, looked both pretty and preppie in a fuchsia dress with slim princess lines.

Most of the veterans now attending B. U. J. C. have gotten back into civvies as fast as possible. Some, however, seem to like the old, familiar uniforms. Take Mr. Riley, for example. Lately he’s been roaming the campus in his khakis. When quizzed ably good, as is Pety Franchelqui, who plays Queen’s sweethearts, he quotes the old adage, “A thousand and one nights.”

It’s the story of a vagabond who goes after a princess. By way of a magic lamp and a Genie, miracles are accomplished to the tune of much merriment and suspense. Eventually, the princess (you know it) comes to a surprise ending. If you ever want to know is the very entertaining story of a brother and sister who, tired of the old routine, decide to find excitement at the Fair. This is accomplished in a roundabout way: the sister finding her man, the brother getting married, and the parents winning the much-hoped-for prizes.

REEL DELIGHTS
State Fair

The picture is very enjoyable, in technicolor, and there is superb acting by all. Dick Haynes, Dana Andrews (what a man), Vivian Blaine, and two old-timers, Charles Winninger and Fay Bainter. The songs are delightful, as is their rendition by Blaine and Haynes. Make it a point to see it.

Christmas in Connecticut is a light, gay comedy starring Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Mitchum. It’s a story about a couple who have to pretend they’re married in order to fool the boss. It’s funny, and the acting is skillful.

Barbara is supposed to be a writer for a smart, modern magazine. She does a scintillating monthly article about cooking—but can’t cook. The boss, Sidney Greenstreet, invites himself to her home for a Christmas week-end so she has to borrow a husband, a baby, and a cook. The boss brings along D. Morgan, a sailor. Barbara falls for him—well, you know the rest.

Back to Bataan sounds exactly like the kind of picture it is, an action-war film.

The story tells of the fall of Bataan and Corregidor; the organization and successful operation of guerrilla warfare; and the return of the Yanks to the island. John Wayne is an American colonel detailed to lead the navy. When it is obvious that the Japanese have won the first round. Anthony Quinn, as a Filipino leader, is unable to stop the deadly progress. The story is by no means a war story; it is a story of courage, of heroism, of love, of sacrifice. It is a story of the men who fought for their country and for their lives. It is a story of the men who fought for their country and for their lives. It is a story of the men who fought for their country and for their lives.

CRACKING THE QUIP

By Jack P. Karafosky

As this is our first contribution for the present term we think it is good to give a change in policy. As many of you will remember, this column has formerly been made up of gossip, information, and the like. Now, however, we are making a new effort. We are trying to bring you a column that will be more informative and more interesting. We want to give you things that you don’t know about your college and your friends.

Well, freshmans week has again rolled past, but without its usual ceremonies. Speaking for many, the lack of a “prayer for rain” was certainly “all wet.” The only ones that felt the slightest drop of water were the “raincoat” girls. They were thoroughly drenched; a fitting end for their bungling, I might add.

Even the library was not safe from the rain. Freshers after O’Connell, Rauscher, and Litchman decided to walk from one room to another, one at a time, and keep them standing constantly.

Ah, yea: there is the incident where a certain freshman young lady said that Mr. Steimann was cute. Notice George Jones looking glum at the same “ceremony.” (It certainly did, he did a swell job playing the part of Assembly and Choral Club.)

Remember, by some freakish chance the “ring-dance” at the Halloween Assembly was interrupted when the line began to go out of windows and up stairs. Must have been the effects of that cider. We all know that a pun is a play on words, depending on the extent to which it’s worth it, of homonyms, that is, words of the same sound but different meanings.

Just for example, we can take an everyday item such as bread. Let us look at how you get to get along in life. First, we all know that a pun is a play on words, depending on the extent to which it’s worth it. We all know that a pun is a play on words, depending on the extent to which it’s worth it. Let us look at how you get to get along in life. First, we all know that a pun is a play on words, depending on the extent to which it’s worth it.

By the way, did any of you notice Ralph Bean slide in on his bike just before registration on the first day of class? He was in New England? Congratulations!

Abe Cadabra, Reese Pelton.

ORIENTATION PROGRAM

On Tuesday the freshmen were given a talk on “How to Study” by Dr. Nicholson.

On Wednesday we were scheduled to take an English Placement test at 3 o’clock.

Thursday we took a test which was new to most of us and we found pleasure in the Kuder Preference Test. At 4 o’clock the student activity program was discussed by the Student Council.

October 19th the social values of the college were discussed in the Studio Theatre, and our orientation program was over.

VETERANS SPEAK AT RALLY
it was like; then they had to clean it up.

The second speaker was Joseph Jonekis, who began by saying that the Welsh people were much nicer than the English, and that in Southern England they were treated as intruders during their infancy training. He was sent to France a week after the invasion, and was in a replacement outfit attached to a division. Then he was transferred to the combat engineers who are the same as infantry except with shovels instead of guns. This was the 18th Infantry Division of the 7th Army. They went through France trying to keep up with the tanks. When first in Normandy, the people were rather distant for fear the Germans would come back; but after getting into Central France, the people welcomed them much more exuberantly than other German troops. So far as to kiss the soldiers whenever the trucks stopped. In Alsace Lorraine the attitude of the people was cooler, perhaps because they spoke German. It was here that they tried and failed to cross the Siegfried Line. Luxembourg reminded Mr. Jonekis of the contrast between the people there and those in other countries. The people were much more modern than in the other countries, and had had a modern sewage disposal system. In Luxembourg City, the people spoke four languages, including English.

In Austria, he was detailed in reconnaissance to find usable salvage, plans, supplies, etc., because of his knowledge of German. He talked to many Burgomasters and found that the American military government had changed them much. They were still Nazis because they were the only ones who knew how to run local governments.

He was then sent on a railroad job, and German engineers were put to work making a railroad through Linz. It was here that he talked to an Austrian who had studied philosophy at Heidelberg and said the German people did not consider themselves beaten after the war.

Liberated prisoners of war would steal from the Germans and we let them because we could not feed them. The Russians had blacklisted the Germans, they would go out and kill them and Joe would have to put the bodies away, which he didn't enjoy particularly. Mr. Jonekis summed up his speech by saying we should unify Germany and begin in the schools, to make the children change from this way of thinking.

Dr. Farley asked, "How can we establish decent relations with France?" Mr. Connolly answered that France is not united, and we can't make friends with both sides.

Dr. Farley asked, "Is it easier to get along with allies or enemies?" Mr. Jonekis answered that it is more difficult to have good relations with our allies because we can only suggest things to them, whereas we can order our enemies.

Dr. Farley then said that these comments have not brought us to a definite conclusion and hoped that we met's ties here are questions in our minds as a result of which we would constantly seek the answers.
