Baseball Team Plays Coughlin High School

The Junior College baseball team played its first game on Tuesday against Coughlin High School at the Scott Street diamond. Coughlin won, 8-2, Rensa, Coughlin pitcher, allowing only five hits in five innings. Coach Henry Peters selected the following men for this game: Andrew Giermak, catcher; Bernard Finkelstein, first base; Nicholas Goobic, short stop; Simon Russin, second base; Scott Mills, third base. In the outfield were James Mollahan, Charles Connors, Robert Beach, Joseph Szafran, and Captain Vincent Loftus. Pitchers were Robert Riemensnyder, Robert Myers, and James Miers. Giermak of Bucknell secured three hits, Bob Myers pitched for the Junior College.

The schedule for the remainder of the season has not yet been definitely arranged. A double header will be played with Wyoming Seminary on May 30.

ANNUAL CONVOCATION PLANNED

Exercises To Be Held June 6
In Auditorium

The first annual convocation of Bucknell University Junior College will be held on Thursday evening, June 6. According to a brief announcement by Dr. John H. Eisenhauer, no definite program has yet been planned. The director will appoint a committee to make all arrangements for this important occasion. Dr. Homer P. Rainey, President of Bucknell University, will be invited as the principal speaker. "The Bison Stampede" will publish full details of the program in the next issue.

"THE CLEAN-UP" SCHEDULED FOR PRODUCTION ON THURSDAY, MAY 16

"The Clean-Up", by Barry Connors, will be presented by the Dramatics Society of the Junior College in the college auditorium on Thursday evening, May 16. This will be the year's final production by the school Thespians. Forrest E. Keller, director of dramatics, in a recent interview declared that he was well-pleased with the work of the members of the cast and feels that their efforts are worthy of the support of the entire student body.

Changes in the personnel of the cast have been made since the cast was first announced in a previous issue of the "Stampede". Irma Hewitt has replaced Sallie Hinton in the character of Mrs. Aswell, a publicist. Miss Hinton was recently injured in an automobile accident. Robert Renville, '38, has been cast in the role of Brooks Cadwell, a capitalist. Hubert Hart, '37, will portray the important role of the politician, Danny Morton, previously assigned to Emmet Molloy, who, living in Hazleton, found it impossible to attend a sufficient number of rehearsals. Hart, who gives to this role a highly individualized interpretation, suggesting the more up-to-date Jimmie Walker type of local politician, will be remembered for his performance as Prince William of Greck in "The Queen's Husband", presented by the Bucknell Players in January.

As announced in the last edition the part of Nina Buckmaster, candidate for mayor, will be played by Eleanor Scureman. Edson Shannon will be John Buckmaster, Nina's husband. Joe Lord is cast as Willie Marsden, Nina's brother; Mellina Davis as Mrs. Cliff Colender, a civic leader; Marian Peters as Mrs. Woodruff, a civic leader; and Jean MacKeey as Elizabeth Madison, a newspaper woman.

The story of the plot, as briefly outlined in the last issue, concerns the determined effort of Nina Buckmaster, Women's Party candidate for mayor, to rise above the graft and corruption of municipal politics, only to find that circumstances make impossible her complete success. Her courageous fight is made more difficult by the opposition of her husband and by dissen-sion within her own party.

An important feature of "The Clean-Up" is the abundance of clever lines. Especially prominent are Morton's sallies and Mrs. Woodruff's speech of notification. The scenes between Nina and John furnish to the play dramatic punch, with comic touches added by Willie, a part peculiarly fitted to Lord's special talents.

Barry Connors is the author of many well-known plays, among them "The Patsy", "Applesauce," and "Fool's Gold." "The Clean-Up" had a successful run on Broadway and is very popular among amateurs.

The intensive schedule of daily rehearsals which the Junior College cast is following assures an outstanding production two weeks from today. All arrangements for the performance are being made by the executive committee which is composed of Ruth Gibbons, Cyril Freed, and James Mollahan.

Twenty-Two Enter Tennis Elimination

Complete Schedule Arranged For Varsity Court Season

At a special meeting of the tennis squad on April 30, Duncan Thomas was elected captain of the 'Varsity tennis team. Singles players thus far selected for the team include Duncan Thomas, John McDonough, and Thomas Mayock. Thomas and McDonough will probably be the first doubles team. Other berths are still uncertain.

In preparation for a strenuous season, twenty-two candidates for the 'varsity tennis team began elimination matches last Friday, April 26. The matches, played at Mayock's court at Bear Creek, will be continued until six members win places on the 'varsity squad. Seeded players in the elimination tournament are John McDonough, Joseph Lord, Thomas Mayock, Robert Melson, George Anthony (all members of last year's team), and Duncan Thomas. These veteran players are receiving active competition from a promising group of candidates, including Robert Mayock, Ripple Schumaker, Sidney Tomberg, James Williams, Victor Navikas, Robert Beach, Joseph Scuntz, Alphonse Warakowski, Milton Charnowitz, James Ramsey, Albert Rohlf, Harvey Harrison, Willard Woolbert, Vincent Maslowski, John O'Donnell, and William Beiswinger.

The following schedule has been arranged by Joseph Lord, manager of the tennis team:

Wednesday, May 1, Wyoming Seminary at Kingston.

Wednesday, May 8, St. Thomas College at Wilkes-Barre.

Friday, May 10, Scranton-Keystone Junior College at Wilkes-Barre.

Faculty To Plan Program Series

Informal Speeches Outlining Study Fields Will Be Given

John S. Gold, assistant professor of mathematics, and Daniel J. Gage, assistant professor of history, were the first speakers in the series of assembly programs planned by the faculty. Professor Gold spoke on "What is History"? Next Tuesday the speakers will be professors Wilfrid H. Crook, Irving L. Churchill, and Voris B. Hall.

An important series of assembly programs will be presented by the faculty of Bucknell University Junior College beginning on Tuesday, April 30. During this series different members of the faculty will discuss before the student body the various branches of, and the possibilities for work in, the different fields of study with which they are connected. The purpose of the programs is to acquaint the students with these various fields and to help them to choose carefully the field in which they will do special work and to plan wisely their work in those fields. The programs, as planned, should be of especial interest to sophomores of the Junior College, who are now ready to pursue special work in particular subjects during their junior and senior years. Freshmen also should be aided by the series of informal talks in planning their future college work.

All students are urged, therefore, to make a special effort to be present at every assembly program on and after Tuesday, April 30.

The administration and the student council have voted full approval of the plan. Definite arrangements for the programs will be announced later.

Engineers Sponsor First Spring Dance

Jenico's Orchestra To Play For "Hop" Tomorrow Evening

The first school social affair since the spring vacation will be the Engineer's Hop, to be held in the college auditorium tomorrow evening, May 3. This dance, sponsored by the Epsilon Engineering Club, will feature the music of Al Jenico's ten-piece band, a musical organization which has a wide following among dance lovers of the Valley. The dance will be informal and will last from eight p. m. until twelve midnight. Tickets are fifty cents each.

The committee in charge of arrangements, are Anthony Yodis, Albert Rohlf, and William Beiswinger, has worked diligently to make the hop, the first school dance since the successful Sen Balu dance last February 15, one of the most successful school events of the year. As an added feature, the committee has planned a few surprises in the way of amateur performances to add to the enjoyment of those attending.

The chaperones for the dance will be Mr. and Mrs. William H. Schuyler, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Gold, and Mr. Voris B. Hall and Miss Iva I. DeWitt.

Dance programs done in pastel green will be provided. Cards will be furnished for those who do not care to dance.

The committee has announced that the sale of tickets has been very satisfactory. A large attendance is expected, as this dance is one of the last social functions of the year.

Ticket Sale Contest Planned By Society

The executive committee for the Dramatics Society's play, "The Clean-Up" has announced that the same arrangements regarding the ticket sales will be in force for the coming production as were used for "The Queen's Husband."

A ticket sale contest will be sponsored, the awards of which will be fifty per cent of the net receipts to be divided among the five students having the largest ticket sales. The contest is open to all students. Twenty-five cent tickets get half credit. Also those tickets sold for the three one-act plays produced March 1 will receive half credit in this contest.

The ticket sale competition has been renewed for this production because of the success of the project when used in January. In the former contest the winners were awarded prizes of $7.50, $5.00, $3.65, $2.50, and $1.96 in cash. The possibilities for students to earn a welcome cash prize by interesting their friends in the final dramatics production of the year are just as great as they were before.

Dr. Tasker Honored

Dr. Roy C. Tasker, assistant professor of biology, received notice early this week that he had been elected to membership in the Cornell University chapter of Sigma Xi, honorary science fraternity. Membership in this fraternity, restricted to graduate science students, is a signal honor granted to Dr. Tasker on the basis of his doctor's dissertation in ichthyology. The subject of his thesis was "The Morphology of the Transformation of the Gonopodium of the Viviparous Top-minnow Platyphacelus Maculatus."

German Club Hike Postponed

The German Club hike, originally scheduled for last Saturday will be held next Saturday, May 4. The club will hike to Korby's Falls near Luzerne.

Miss Post And Etiquette

There is a very valuable, but apparently little handled book in the Bucknell University Junior College library. We refer to that volume entitled 'ETIQUETTE' by one Emily Post. Miss Post is the dernier cri on social usage, or the correct thing to do at all times. Her book is so arranged that it is very simple to find the solution to any problem that might worry one anxious to impress a new sweetheart, business acquaintance, professor, or fellow student.

Of course, Miss Post does seem to carry things a little too far some times. If one were to follow her dictates verbatim, the result would be a stiff formality which would fail to put others at their ease. However, there are numberless little delicacies of behavior that the average person misses. Remarkably few young men realize that it is their duty to precede a young lady whom they are escorting off a bus or other common carrier, in order to help her down the steps. Not that the modern miss is unable to hop off a bus, but it is gratifying to have a firm masculine hand out-stretched to assist her descent. On the other hand, few young ladies seem to remember that, in entering a theatre or restaurant with a young man, if there is no employee, as a waiter or usher, to lead the way, the young man again precedes, to guide her to a seat. The feminist of today is quite likely to gallop off, dragging her beau behind her.

To many people the fine points of social behavior are "too much trouble" or "sissy". Those people do not interest us; to the boy or girl who is anxious to conduct himself or herself properly, we offer our commendation and Emily Post.

The most important rule to follow is kindness to others. If Miss Post has neglected to treat a knotty question that might confront you, let natural courtesy be your guide and you will nine times out of ten do the correct thing. Etiquette, as a fine art, is designed to make contacts between human beings as social as possible and lessen friction between individuals in their relations with one another. Don't, however, make a fetish of politeness and perform every social duty by rule. People won't like you. Govern your actions by kindness and consideration for others, in a free and easy manner, and you can't fail to be a social lion or butterfly according to your sex.

"Hop" To It

As I See It

Spring Reveries

I would like to know who has my Psychology text. If it is returned no questions will be asked nor any grudge borne. This is an awful dumb time of the year to borrow a book anyway. Why didn't you do it at the beginning of the year?

We hope that by the time the Engineers have their dance the victrola will be fixed. Everyone wants it. Why isn't it and a lot of other things done? Such silly questions I ask!

We trust the Engineers will make a noble success of their social endeavor tomorrow evening. They are rated for being lone wolves and it is hoped the dance won't be that exclusive.

I take time now to predict the success of the next and final production of the Dramatics Society. All the members of the cast assure you a brilliant and distinctive evening.

When asked his opinion, Mr. Loftus stated that the cast would do well to clean up the auditorium after they are done rehearsing.

God, I hate this job! After this I have to go to play practice. No matter where I go I find Saricks on my neck. Where's your column? No. 63 John to u. r. c. I even dream about it.

Why doesn't E. E. Scureman return the pencils etc., which she has borrowed during the course of the past two years—and what on earth does she do with them?

The above, I think, is a fitting finish for any such column as this linotripe. —O'Shaunnessy.

Poem

O climb with me, my lissome maid,
To the moon, and the stars, and the blue,
Where love has long in fancy played
As I, my maid, shall play with you.

And I shall sing, my maid, to you,
"There was never a love like mine",
And drift along in the wealth of blue
To the moon, through the milky brine.

And you shall be as one with me,
With a kiss that confesses all.
And we shall live in fantasy
In a three room flat and a hall
—Oed.

Awakening

Dawn rends the curtain of the night
And bathes the earth with scorching light.
Against the background of the trees
The dew has knit a saffron frieze.

The birds fling paeans to the sky
All living things with one mad cry
Burst into voice. The day is here.
But my heart life can never sear;
Last night my baby died.

Myers' Poems Published

Robert Myers, a freshman at Bucknell University Junior College, was honored by having four of his poems accepted by "Bucknell Verse", written by students of Bucknell University and published under the auspices of Epsilon Beta Chapter of Sigma Tau Delta. The titles of Myers' poems are: "Moth at Dusk", "Scrub Pine", "Butterfly Wings", and "Hear".

Copies of "Bucknell Verse" are on sale at the registrar's office. The price is fifty cents per copy.

Shannon's Essay In Contest

Mr. Donald Stillman selected Edson Shannon's essay, "Dirge", to be entered in the "Atlantic Monthly" Essay Contest. Shannon's essay was chosen from those submitted by Mr. Stillman's Advanced Exposition Class. The essay, "Dirge", describes the writer's reflections after witnessing a train accident. Shannon, a sophomore, is on the editorial staff of "The Bison Stampede".

A New Physics Text

FROM GALILEO TO COSMIC RAYS: by Harvey Brace Lemon; with photographs by the author and illustrated by Mrs. Chichi Lasley; Pub. by the University of Chicago Press, Chicago.

This is not a textbook in the ordinary sense but rather an embellished, cleverly illustrated, and interestingly written syllabus of the general field of Physical Science. It immediately gains and holds the reader's interest by the conversational style of presentation and by reference to the everyday events about us as illustrative material for the discussion. Many of the photographs are stereoscopic in character, for by this means and the use of suitable lenses the object depicted may be seen in three dimensions, much to the advantage of the observer.

For a general lecture course for those students interested in the cultural side of science this book would be invaluable as collateral reading. It is well supplied with references to more comprehensive readings.

The book is divided into five sections. This arrangement follows somewhat the usual textbook procedure, commencing with Mechanics, then considering Heat, Electricity and Magnetism, and completing the work with two sections not usually so constituted, Electricity and Matter, and Waves and Radiation.

The equations, inseparable from the presentation of such a subject, are backed by animated cartoons depicting the idea or by a common object or objects performing the proper function. Usually, too, there are illustrative problems to further aid in "putting across" the idea involved.

The concept of Energy is emphasized and repeated to the extent of four chapters. The repetition is well placed and clarifies well this most fundamental concept.

The approach to Electricity and Magnetism is historical in character and emphasis is placed upon the experimenters as well as upon their discoveries. The common experiences used for illustrating the general idea are here not so plentiful and the ideas must of necessity be formulated into a whole by analogy, and illustration of a broader character.

The latter two parts of the book, dealing with Electricity and Magnetism and with Waves and Radiation, are written with especial broadness to delineate the "building blocks" and their assembling into matter which we can see and use. These "building blocks" of electrons, protons, positrons, cosmic rays, waves and related radiations which are observable only by their effects, are discussed thoroughly together with the personalities pushing forward the frontiers of this science.
—V. B. Hall

Psychologist Addresses Students

Dr. Joseph Miller, psychologist of the Wilkes-Barre City Schools, addressed the students of the psychology and sociology classes of the Junior College on Thursday afternoon, April 25. Dr. Miller's topic was "The Measurement of Intelligence in Children". The lecture was illustrated with slides and motion pictures.

LOOKING BACKWARD

Excerpts from "Gesta Bucknellensium"
—Henrich Blazius, pub. 1970.

SIGMA NU SIGMA

In the second semester of the school year 1934-1935, which furnished so many outstanding characters to Bucknell's "Hall of Fame", there appeared an organization known as the "Sigma Nu Sigma". This exclusive club had for its members certain "bridge sharks," as the game was in vogue at the time, and was formed primarily for the purpose of indulging in this once popular recreation. Among its members were Joseph Salsburg, later to become "America's Male Sweetheart" of stage and screen fame; and James Ramsey, later Governor of Nevada, impeached 1956 (see Hopkins "Graft in High Places", published 1967); and other famous characters now legendary to the Wilkes-Barre institution.

Its evidently exclusive nature can be shown by references to utterances of its members (see footnote). Its lodgings were in the old Y. M. C. A. building across from "Old Main", where Galson's "Mammoth Meal Emporium" now stands. Hubert Hart, one of the brothers, once remarked in a speech that "It was formed as a bridge club and since there are only eight really good bridge players in the school, there are only eight in the club." Robert Mayock vouchsafed, "Since we formed our club there is no one with any brains around school anymore, so we stay in our room and commune chiefly with our own greatness. You have no idea what intellectual minds meet over our bridge table." This rather cold, intellectual, impersonal disdain of the rest of the school did nothing to endear the club or its members, the students.

Justin O'Donnell, Sophomore Class President, and later political boss of East End (also see Hopkins) laughed loud and long. Inferences that the club was effeminate were bandied about by prominent Bucknellians. O'Donnell's expression, "They leave a bad taste in my mouth," was taken up by his multitude of satellites and the halls of Alma Mater resounded to the hue and cry. Some obscure wag went so far as to christen them "Gardenias". The "Gardenias" defended themselves, as best they could, by hurling intellectual epithets, such as "lame brain," and declaring that their opponents were only jealous that they could not be admitted.

The "Bison Stampede" reflected the controversy among the students and gave much space to Sigma Nu Sigma. Joseph Lord (afterward a regular contributor to "Sweetheart Stories" and other romantic "pulp") also made a vehement denouncement of the fraternity. But he was laughed to scorn.

The controversy raged for a short time but then lapsed as the time of graduation drew near. The solemnity of the occasion healed the wounds in the social state and when the last words of the convocation were lost to memory in the summer months the death of the organization through its own inanity also occurred. Some historians in treating of the club believe that this is one of the abnormal growths of society, one of its queer quirks, while the more romantic believe that it was a case of "misunderstood souls" who longed for Olympian isolation and intellectual development apart from the mundane. Both arguments have their merits. This book maintains a strictly neutral attitude.

Engineers Hear Professor Kintner

Robert C. Kintner, assistant professor of chemical engineering on the campus, spoke on "Metals Through the Microscope" at a meeting of the engineering students of the Junior College on April 26. Several other campus professors have addressed this group at previous meetings.

Social Notes

Dr. Tasker spent the spring vacation in Ithaca, where he visited relatives and where he did research work in the Cornell University library.

Eleanor Scureman entertained at an afternoon tea at her home on Saturday, April 27. The following persons were present: Jean MacKeeby, Helen Arms, Beverly Jones, Lois Devendorf, Peggy Austin, Irma Hewitt, Betty Bittenbender, Mary Huntley, Agnes Wolfe, Jean Armstrong, Marian Peters, Rita Cavan, Sallie Hinton, Mellina Davis, Marjorie Richards, Hilda Fletcher, Ruth Gibbons, and the hostess, Mrs. Scureman poured.

Sallie Hinton, who was injured in an automobile accident, has returned to school after having been confined to her home for several days with an infected knee.

Jimmy Williams spent several days of the vacation as the guest of friends in Philadelphia. Other students visiting in Philadelphia were Gerard Golden and Robert Mayock.

Helen Arms sailed on April 10 for a ten day cruise to Bermuda.

Jean MacKeeby spent the vacation in Atlantic City.

Harold Shoemaker visited friends at Cortland, N. Y., for several days during the vacation.

Don't Forget The Engineer's Hop

From A Bow-legged Gal To Her Knock-Kneed Paw.

Dear Dad,

Haven't much time to write because too many things are about to happen. The Engineers' Hop tomorrow night is next on the schedule.

I guess I've told you that the Dramatics Society is going to produce "The Clean Up" on May 16. One interesting thing is the contest they're holding for the ticket sales again this time. Remember Jean Armstrong won $7.50 on the last one. Irma Hewitt, too, got something over $5. They both discouraged the rest of us by telling us they were out to win again. But I figured that we all have an equal chance, and well, you know what happens when a bow-legger puts her mind to something. An opportunity to win $5 or more makes me perk up my ears. But don't scold, Dad. Really there is another motive for my efforts. I offer this as straightforwardly as I know how—without a blush—I'm glad for this, one of my last chances to back and boost a Junior College enterprise. The old rah-rah spirit wells strong when I think of the fun I've had here.

The other kids seem to be seriously considering the possibilities, too, so wish me luck. I'm out for gore.

'Bye,

Your loving daughter,
"Bow-Legs"

Visit "Cap and Dagger" Workshop

Victor Navikas and David Williams, accompanied by Professor Keller, visited the work shop of "Cap and Dagger", the campus dramatic organization at Lewisburg yesterday.

Navikas is designing the scenery for "The Clean-Up" and will have charge of its construction. Williams is serving as general assistant to Navikas and, next year, will become his successor, taking complete charge of the work in stagecraft.

Final Debate Planned

Arrangements are being made with Professor Arthur L. Brandon, campus director of debating, for a debate between the Bucknell University and Junior college teams. According to Dr. Irving L. Churchill, coach of the Junior College team, this debate, which will be the last of the season, is to be conducted according to the Oregon or the Parliamentary styles rather than the usual Oxford type. The debaters who will represent the Junior College in this contest have not yet been selected.

Bucknell Graduate Conducts Group Through Phila. School

The Pre-Med Club of the Junior College traveled to Philadelphia on Wednesday, April 17, to inspect the Jefferson Medical College. The trip was made in cars belonging to Edith Schrey Charles Burns, Professor Tasker, and Mr. Faint.

Leaving Wilkes-Barre at 5:30 A. M. on Wednesday morning, the club encountered heavy snow storms on the mountains, but arrived safely in Philadelphia at 10:30 A. M. From the Clinton Hotel the members of the club went to the Jefferson Medical College, where they were met by Mr. Harry Moser, a former Bucknell student and now a sophomore at the medical school. Mr. Moser conducted the group on a tour of inspection through the chemical and biological laboratories, the lecture halls and the library, which is one of the best medical libraries in the United States. Later Mr. Moser spoke briefly to the club on the best method of preparing for entrance into a medical school. The visitors also heard a lecture in the amphitheatre by a well-known Philadelphia surgeon.

After lunch the club returned to the amphitheatre to witness an operation for the removal of a brain tumor from a young lady. The operation, performed by four famous surgeons, lasted three and one-half hours.

Male members of the club returned to Wilkes-Barre Wednesday night, but Edith Schrey, Alice Shannon, Madeline Searfoss, and Dorothy Beiswinger remained in Philadelphia until Thursday.

The Lounge And Gamma Chi

To The Editor:

At the beginning of the year a pleasant airy room was set aside for the Bucknell University Junior College women students. It was then merely a room filled with sunshine and girls, most of whom were strangers to each other. When the room saw friendships rapidly developing, it knew that things would begin happening, because a group of women can seldom get together without some sort of action.

One morning the room almost cracked its plaster with pride in seeing that it contained comfortable maple furniture in addition to the sunshine and girls. Perhaps it worried for awhile at the combination, but it soon laughed at the noisy ambition that would allow no one a lazy existence for long.

It wore an "I told you so" expression the day things began really to happen with the forming of the Beta Gamma Chi Sorority composed of every woman student with Jean Armstrong at the helm. And things did happen. One evening the poor room was dazzled by the festive-gowned ladies pausing there to lay aside a wrap or powder a nose. The Beta Gamma Chi was having a dance. It wasn't long until sunny light was made possible at all times in the room by the addition of lamps and a mirror to reflect personal radiance bought with money earned from the dance.

The room was charmed at the delightful tea given for Miss Hughes by the Beta Gamma Chi. Then the girls gave a tea for Mrs. Stillman, who had been married recently to one of our professors. The room decided that romance was a great thing.

Very few knew the recent soap-box orations attempted by several of the girls and finished by Lorna Holbrook with much fire and force. Walls don't tell tales.

Now the room harbors enthusiasm and a good-fellowship atmosphere in addition to girls, sunshine, and furniture. It is sure that the Beta Gamma Chi is an organization that you're going to hear more of. It's written on the wall.

English Class Gems

The following quotations are choice sentences selected from papers submitted by students in the English classes of Dr. Churchill and Mr. Stillman. They are presented without comment.

Classicism is the art of classing the literature read as to if it is a lyric, comedy, tragedy, Pastoral lyric, political idea, etc.

The figure of speech is the quotation in monotony.

I think Aristophanes' Bird is sublime because to me it did not have much sense. I also believe that "Hippolytis" is sublime because it is so very hard to understand.

On Milton: Even in his blank verse he unobviously introduced rhyme with misleading intervals between.

Her reputation was practically ruined. People looked at her with a hatred eye. But her determined will led her to the point that she wasn't worthy of such mistreatment and finally did but through perseverance.

One could almost smell the vitals from the vivid description of their odor. Sappho was the goddess of love.

Moloch is the Spanish general in Voltaire's "Candide".

Sir Joshua Reynolds was one of the group of Carolina poets who wrote during the reign of Charlemagne.

Excalibur was the squire's horse in Don Quixote.

Grendel was Roland's sword.

Rozinandi was the name of Roland's bugle.

In Browning's "Incident of the French Camp" the boy was mortally wounded. When he was congratulated for his heroic bravery he died smilingly like an athlete when he was told he won second prize when he really won the first.

In Browning's "My Last Duchess" the duke points to a statue of Neptune taming a sea lion, then remarks, "That's the way I tame them".

After I read Milton's essay on Education I thought our educational system was too laxative.
