Student Council Planning Budget For Next Year

Allotments To Organizations Changed in New Proposal

PUBLICATIONS FEEsdale

The Student Council of the Junior College P. M. Joint Faculty Committee on Student Activities on Thursday, May 3, to take preliminary action on the student budget for next year. The council voted to retain the semester fee of five dollars per student, making the yearly budget for extra-curricular activities ten dollars per student. Several changes were made, however, in the allocation of this fund among the various student organizations. The budget drawn up by the council appropriates the semester fee of each student as shown below. To the right of the proposed item for next year the appropriation made to each organization by this year's budget is shown for comparison:

Athletics $1.25 1.75
Publications 1.50 1.40
Dramatics 50 75
Glee Club 25 35
Debating 25 35
Contingent Fund 1.00 1.75
Arts & Science 5.00 5.00

The only item remaining unchanged is the Department of Athletics.

The allotment to athletics has been raised fifty cents per student in the hope that by placing athletics on a better footing a larger program may be carried on next year. Income from the baseball fund, however, has been granted to the Glee Club and to the Arthus, which places athletics on a less favorable basis. This plan grants more money to the dramatics and debaters. The latter receives the larger cut, twenty-five cents per student.

This experience has demonstrated that the school spirit of this year's fund is unnecessary. This item, consequently, is cut fifty cents in the budget.

The new budget has not yet been distributed by the council to the faculty, but at the meeting to be held tomorrow afternoon, Thursday, May 4, the budget will be presented to the council and the faculty committee for final approval. Because of the importance of this matter the council decided to hold an open meeting to which all students interested in the budget for next year may come to express their views or to cite their objections.

Cans and Gowns

Academic functions of the Commencement season are approaching and with the approaching festivities, the unfamiliar but conspicuous functions. Among these are the academic gowns and symbolism of the academic gowns are two significant symbols. The historical details have been amply supplied in various histories, and descriptive dictionaries such as the Merriam-Webster. A simple concise statement may be made: the academic gowns are worn by students and other honored guests.

The academic gowns, caps, and hoods are worn during the Middle Ages. Their present forms are modifications of the distinctive dress of monks, friars, and other ecclesiastics; of certain features of bourgeois and feudal court dress; of university dress in universities of the 12th to 16th centuries in Flanders, England, Cambridge, and Paris. Likewise, the very short, pointed cap known as the biretta (or, depending on the language, Master, Magister, or Doctor), are those which became customary in the Middle Ages.

Gowns, caps, and hoods indicate (a) the department of learning in which the degree is taken; (b) the degree itself; and (c) the institution granting the degree. The caps are shaped alike for all; the tassels vary, being of gold, blue, crimson, and green colors. Masters and Bachelors they are either (a) square, (b) round, or (c) in conical form, according to the department of learning represented.

All are black in color; they vary as to material, size, and cut. The Doctor's cap is the best, and its material is the best. The Master's gown is usually of silk, but is of lesser quality than that of the Bachelor. The Bachelor's gown is of material other than silk. The Bachelor's hood is worn during the Bachelor's degree.

The Bachelor's gown is long, open at the end, and terminating in a point. On the Master's gown the sleeves are closed at the end; the arm protrudes through the sleeve. The sleeve of the Doctor's gown is very voluminous, and is closed at the end. The Bachelor's gown alone may carry, and usually does carry, three broad chasms of velvet, or black velvet, the colors representing the department of learning in which the degree is earned.

The hoods are the most conspicuous and unusual features of the academic dress. They seem to be extreme modifications of the hoods of friars, monks, and certain civilians of the Middle Ages. The Academic hood is the small Bachelor's hood to the very bulky Doctor's hood. The Master's hood is turned outward to afford the complete exposure, of a velvet cloth, and to the color representing the department of learning in which the degree has been earned.

The academic gowns and hoods are in standard American practices as follows:

“Bucknell Players” Have Active Dramatic Season

Society Sponsors Two Major Productions and Play Contest

PROF. KELLER DIRECTOR

The second season of The Bucknell Players, the dramatic organization of the Junior College, has been one of considerable activity and achievement. Besides sponsoring three major productions, the society carried on a regular series of meetings in which interested speakers discussed various phases of dramatic activity. Professor Forrest R. Keller was director of dramatics and coordinated the two major productions of the college.

On October 19, 1934, the members of the society met and elected the following officers for the year: president, Eleanor Scureman; vice-president, Robert Beach; secretary, Marjorie Richards; business manager, John O'Connell; Cyril Frost was appointed production manager, and Ambrose Barrie, assistant to the director.

“Bargains in Cathy”

The first public performance was given Friday, November 16, when the one-act play, “Bargains in Cathy,” was presented during the Open House program. The play, directed by Professor Keller, had in its cast Jean MacKee, James Williams, Eleanor Scureman, Joseph Salsburg, Mellina Davis, Joseph Lord, and Cyril Freed. The same cast presented the play for the student bodies of Dollar, Ole Force, and Moscow High Schools in April.

Pol. Science Club Completes Program

Successful Year Includes Three Dinners And Field Trips

The Political Science Club was organized early in October, 1934, through the efforts of Dr. J. Orin Oliphant, professor of history and government, its aim being to provide an extra-curricular activity for the students particularly interested in the problems of government. Part of its program was to include trips to visit local government buildings and dinners at which some prominent speaker would address the club.

Officers for the first semester were: president, Eugene Gillespie; vice-president, James Williams; secretary-treasurer, Sally Winston.

After the trip to the law library at the court house late in October, plans were made for the first dinner. This was held on November 21 at the Vanitty Fair Tea Room with 20 club members present. Attorney William Valentine was the speaker. After the banquet the next move of the club was to start clipping news items from the newspapers, which were to be collected and pasted in a scrap-book, later to be presented to the college library. Various members of the club were placed in charge of different committees to coordinate this work.

Early in the second semester the club held a dinner at the Y. M. C. A., at which Dr. Eisenhauer was the guest speaker. A meeting of the Wilkes-Barre Kelly Club was attended in March. On March 19, 1935, the debating competition was entered by the society in the Y. M. C. A. Debaters met delegates from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Buffalo, and Scranton. Debating is one of the most interesting things on the club’s calendar, and the complete program is scheduled for the next session.

During the first semester meetings were held three times a month. During the second semester, because of the absence of Dr. Oliphant, who took up a professorship in a southern city, meetings were held only twice a month.

Officers for the second semester were: president, James Ramsey; vice-president, Robert Renville, secretary-treasurer, Sally Winston.

Dr. Eisenhauer At Conference

On Tuesday, May 13, Dr. John H. Eisenhauer attended a meeting of the committee which planned the educational conference at Lewistown. This conference, usually held each year during December or November, is open to public school teachers and students.

The dinner this fall, the complete decided, would be confined to a dis- cussion of the general features of the curriculum. The matter of setting a definite date for the fall meeting was left in the hands of Dr. Frank Davis.

Sophomore Take Tests

The sophomores of the Junior College passed several entertaining and interesting (?) hours on Monday, May 13, when they took the culture tests made up and distributed for the delight of college students by the Carnegie Foundation. Incidentally, the tests are intended to measure the general culture assimilated by the average college student during the years spent in acquiring knowledge. The tests were also given on the campus at Lewistown.

Pre-Med. Club Sees Pictures

The Pre-Med Club met in the women’s lounge on the evening of Monday, May 12, at 7:30. During the meeting four sets of moving pictures were shown. The pictures dealt with “Circulation of the Blood”, “Frogs, Tadpoles, Salamanders,” “Development of the Bird Embryo”, and “Reptiles.” The meeting was open to any student interested in the subjects dealt with.

Prof. Gummo Speaks At Dallas

Blanchard S. Gummo, assistant professor of art at Bucknell University, spoke before the student body of Dallas High School on Friday, May 10. He discussed various phases of art.

During the year the dramatic society has secured several valuable possessions, which it leaves as a legacy to future Bucknell Players. These include two flood lights, one complete set, which is convertible and may be used for many different productions, a fairly complete set of tools for work in stage carpentry, and a valuable make-up kit. The set was constructed by Victor Naviaux and Alphonse Werakomaki. Francis Rudnicki was in charge of make-up during the year.
