Columbia System Extends Radio Facilities To University

On Saturday evening, March 14, Bucknell University will go on the air in a program to be transmitted by the Columbia Broadcasting System over its network station of "Bucknell Night".

The annual meetings of fifty-four Bucknell alumni clubs throughout the country will be held on that date. The three thousand members of these clubs listen to this radio program, to be broadcast from Lewisburg, as part of their dinner meetings. As a part of each individual club meeting there will be a presentation of important plans for the centennial program of the University which will be celebrated in 1946.

Bucknell night will begin promptly at six o'clock on the evening of March 14. The broadcast will be carried from the Columbia Station WABC, and a half hour this time and for a half hour thereafter is made possible by the co-operation of J. E. Beibach, director of program operations for the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The entire program is under the direction of the Board of Directors of the alumni association. It is composed of Raymond W. B. McDonald, the Bucknell Men's Chorus and the University Mixed Chorus and the University Chorus. The directors selected for the program together with a list of the numbers which will be carried on the broadcast will be announced by the Columbia System previous to the date of broadcasting. Each of the Bucknell groups will make a survey of the total audience for the purpose of selecting a room in which the program will be recorded and installing equipment.

The Wyoming Valley alumni of Bucknell University and friends will hold their dinner meeting at the Westmoreland Hotel at six o'clock. All the members of the University faculty will be served at this dinner. The program of musical numbers and brief addresses by the local alumni will be heard.

Attorney James P. Harris of Kingston is the chairman of the Alumni committee of Bucknell composed of Professor Arthur L. Brandon, chairman; Professor Paul Budd, Dean of the College; and Rev. William Curnow of Shickshinny, secretary.

The library of Bucknell University Junior College now owns 1175 volumes, according to the first semester report submitted by John M. Stott, the librarian. When school closed last June, the library's holdings included 900 volumes, of which 109 were donated. At present 300 books are catalogued. These uncataloged consist largely of bound magazines donated by the Wyoming Historical Society and of a 197 volume set of the "War of the Rebellion" papers, a gift from the Bucknell University Library at Lewisburg.

The Hoyt Library also gave several volumes, among which were a set of "Messages and Papers of the Presidents" and Scott's "Waverly Novels" included in the number of gift volumes, which total 150, are government documents presented by Congressman M. Moreland and Senator J. Ordway of Seward.

In addition to these books the library has acquired by loan from the Wyoming Historical Society nearly 1000 volumes which include some material in American history, census reports, and miscellaneous historical and sociological material.

These new volumes in the literature collection, and 60 in the economics and sociology collections. The college subscribes to many of the major political and scientific journals, and the science library consists of only 24 volumes. The science library is being constantly added. However, the lack of science books is partially overcome by subscriptions to several magazines dealing with scientific subjects. Among these periodicals are the "American Mathematical Monthly," "Chemical and Metallurgical Engineering," "General Electric Review," "Science News Letter," and "The Telescopes." The library subscribes to 11 magazines and receives almost as many more as gifts.

The total circulation for the first semester was 1641 books, of which 1092 were circulated overnight from the reserve shelves. The average number of books taken out by each student was 2.9. The average number of non-renewals circulated per student was only 2.6.

To An Elm Tree

No place in this world, nor in heaven, offers so much to one as does to me, Sturdy and staunch, and majestic it stands.

Free from the vice and decay of man,
Free to discover the secrets of night,
Free from the eternal's early light.

There in the early hours of morning,
My tree and I see the world yearning—
Still standing firm for reformation.

To see the world yearning for reparation.

Inside the小鸟 swoop to rest.

For one single moment upon Elm's breaths

Only again to fly in the sky—

Thankful to Him that you and I

That I have and I have been able to see

As lovely a thing as you elm tree.

To see in my walk in the cool of the night—

My tree and I hold communion with—

Political Science Club Attend Council Session

In furthering its program of viewing as many local government institutions as possible, the Political Science Club attended a session of the Wilkes-Barre Borough Council last Tuesday, March 5, at the City Hall. This close view of a local governmental unit enabled club members to get a much clearer picture of how city governmental functions. The next trip will be to the County Court house to witness the proceedings of the judiciary court. Arrangements for this visit are being made by the hands of Sallie Hinton and Edward Hartmann.

Material for the club scrapbook is accumulating rapidly. Many newspaper clippings have been received and are ready for inclusion in the book. The Political Science Club is planning a banquet for the latter part of March to which it will invite the Junior College debating society and a college professor. The dinner sponsored by this club is not open to all students but is for club members. Any one interested is invited to attend.

Dean Interviews Students

More than fifty students of the Junior College here will confer with Dean Homer H. Riverburg during his visit here last month. Dean Riverburg also gave conferences to other campuses next year. Thirteen students have already filed for membership in the Junior College debate team to which club members are invited.
