Class of '67 to Meet 'It Tomorrow at Party

What is 'It'? No one has seen 'It' on the campus since the House of Representatives, by popular par-ty, sponsored four years ago by Sterling and Butler Halls. At 10:30 p.m., Saturday, April 27, 'It will make its comeback at the 'Twilight Zone' party.

For the past two years Sterling and Butler Halls have held a party in honor of the incoming dormitory freshmen during their Spring Weekend here. In keeping with their custom, the two dormitories will sponsor "The Twilight Zone" in Sterling Hall tomorrow evening. From 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. students can dance to the music of the Rhythm Area amid decorations which will complement the mysterious theme.

Co-chairmen Julie Evans and Joe Lijewski have announced that there will be no charge for admission in to "The Twilight Zone."

Debaters Rank Second In Bucknell Tournament

The debate team recently won seven of eight rounds in the Bucknell University "Good Neighbor" debates, hosted by Bucknell University and King's College for first place but dropped to second place on two points. Jamison Cohen, a junior, placed third in individual speaker excellence.

Douglas Kistler and David Levy, affirmative debaters, won all their rounds, as did co-debaters Ed Leib and Leib, and two teams from Pennsylvania State University Women. Negative debaters Rosemary Rush and James Frosdick defeated Penn State Men, Penn State We- men, and Leib.

Ten teams from six colleges and universities participated in the debate. The topic debated was: Re- solved: That The Non-Communist Nations Of The World Should Form an Economic Community.

Accompanying the competing Wilkes teams were co-chars: Charles Lord and Dick Budd and participating debater Claire Sheri- dan.

Manuscript Presents Film

"School for Scoundrels," an En- glish comedy with Peter Sellers, will be shown by the Biology Society to prospective freshmen to-night at 8 o'clock in Stark 118.

This presentation is part of the program to acquaint potential dormitory students with the academic, cultural, and social life on campus.

The general student body will have the opportunity to view the film at 8:30 in Stark 118.

Screams of fright or, rather, howls of laughter were the reac- tion to the events mentioned above, to the initial appearance of the film which it made four years ago at a Sterling-Butler party.

Accountants To Greet Pre-Frosh At Collegiate Twist Tonight at 9

Many prospective college stu- dents will be on campus during this weekend which is devoted to the Collegiate Twist, a dance sponsored by the Accounting Club. The pre-froshmen will wear nametags and be members of a committee, composed of I.D.C., Student Government, and Accounting Club Co-chairmen, will have a "Twist" to them, feel at ease by introducing them to people and by dancing with them. The Counts, featuring the vocal work of Melvin Wynn, will provide the music for this affair.

During intermission, the Collegi- ans will sing. After this perfor- mance they will lead everyone in singing the "Alma Mater" and the "Wilkes Choral" with the aid of song sheets that will be distributed.

Dress is casual, and cokes and potato chips will be served at the dance to be held in the gym from 9 to 11 p.m.

The general chairman of the "Collegiate Twist" is Joe Klipsch. Senora Masulli and Mr. Hoover are the co-chairmen.

Science Exhibits Featured

A Science Show, sponsored by the Biological Society, will be held tomorrow in order to demonstrate to visiting high schools students what the College offers in its sci- ence curriculum. Invitations have been sent to forty-two local high schools; incoming freshmen and the student body are also welcome. The Show will be open from 10 to 12 a.m. and from 1 to 4 p.m. in Black Hall.

Exhibits have been prepared in the following fields: Comparative Anatomy and Evolution, the His- tory of Biology, Histology (the study of tissues), Bacteriology, and Embryology. An exhibit on Man in space, demonstrating the condi- tions to which Man will have to adapt himself, and one on Medi- cal Botany, showing crude drugs which will be Robert Werner, associate professor of economics, who will speak on "Your position in the business field."

Following the speech, the students will have an opportunity to hear speeches given by members of the administration and student leaders, in addition to being able to attend departmental meetings. At these meetings, the "froshmen" will have an opportunity to ask questions concerning their prospective ma-

A Speedy Recovery

A man is known for his accomplishments. He is known, too, for his endeavors whether they be successful or not. The campus has known great men, and has considered them great because of their tireless efforts to improve the College. Two such men are College President Eugene Forley and head of the philosophy and religion department Dr. Stanio Vujic. These men, stilled in their respective areas of work, have left to work with the community, the College, and the students in solidifying friendships. Because of the tremendous responsibilities accepted by these men they, as do industrious men everywhere, fall prey to overwork. The campus was sad when it learned of their recent illnesses. But it was not shocked because all knew that overwhelming responsibility, when seriously taken, will often exhaust even the most powerful man.

Fortunately both men are recuperating quickly and may soon return to their duties. The College wishes them a speedy recovery and reminds them that “the end and the reward of toil is rest; the best of men have ever loved repose.”

Welcome Future Freshmen

—and enjoy yourself during this weekend dedicated to you. The campus delights in welcoming you and places it in your power for your arrival. Everything is planned — everything except the cordial attitude at the College. That is never “planned.” It will be seen this contrary to public opinion, college men and women are NICЕ.

The Beacon staff, with the entire College, welcomes you to view the varied facets of college life, and to be a part of them in the fall.

Letter to the Editor...

Dear Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to sincerely thank the 65 Willow Street, Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Project group for helping to contribute their time and effort to the creation of this wonderful project on April 6. The Project was a great success thanks to the unselfish efforts of the students and instructors of the project.

Ron Cicone and Nancy Palanino, Co-chairmen of the Student Project Work Days at the 65 Willow Street, Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Project, are flying for Zoe on April 7, to devote special attention to the students and instructors of the project in order to ensure the success of their projects.

Up to this date, the total income from these two projects has reached $499.50, and contributions are still coming in. This money will be assessed in an interest-earning fund to provide a scholarship for two students. Zoe Mavrommatis, the recipient of the project, was a strong, independent student and an influential personality on the Willow Street, Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Project, when he begins his studies at Wilkes.

However, the success of the Student Project Work Days at the Willow Street, Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Project, is in the fact that the money raised will be used to help the students and instructors of the project. Rather, the ultimate success of the Project, I feel, lies in the fact that it has been a proud and willingly contributed to by the students and instructors of the project. It is unfortunate that themselves might at any time enjoy the benefits of a college education. I believe the Willow Street, Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Project was a true success.

Sincerely yours,

Jerry Berk, President
Inter-Dormitory Council

And your wing glasses finger

There was music then.

And I kissed your crystal eyes
And played all your perfume.

True love you proved false.

amended as has been the case in many constitutions have been changed before; why not now? Must we be shackled to the irrevocable precedent maintained by the present constitution?

In answer to those who would amend rather than revise, they should remember that a constitution has been amended to death already; amended to the point of having become a patchwork quilt of additions which are so far, grossly lacking in the need of the people.

For example, in one recent session of the legislature, a group of eight amendments were proposed. To become part of our constitution, said amendments must go through a rather strenuous procedure. In the first instance, they must be passed by the two successive legislative houses of two successive legislative sessions. In the second instance, the state’s voters, a process which takes about five years. Since 1937, only six amendments have been passed by the two successive legislatures, two of which have been approved by the voters in referendums.

The above facts as evidence that a constitutional amendment is not a necessary evil. In fact, it is just the opposite. The proposed amendment is not for the purpose of providing a very temporary and limited relief for the current state of the people. It is for the purpose of providing a permanent solution of all the problems which a society may have. It is for the purpose of providing a permanent solution of the many problems which a society may have. It is for the purpose of providing a permanent solution of the many problems which a society may have. It is for the purpose of providing a permanent solution of the many problems which a society may have. It is for the purpose of providing a permanent solution of the many problems which a society may have. It is for the purpose of providing a permanent solution of the many problems which a society may have.

Japanese Lyric Poetry Is Discussed at Forum

"They blossom, and then we gaze, and then the blossoms wane, and then..."

Bonnie Jenkins presented the poem "An Introduction to Japanese Lyric Poetry" last Tuesday. She stated that most of the verses deal with love and nature and that, pervading through the poem, is a tone of gentle melancholy. Rarely does the Japanese poet cry out in anguish or laugh for joy; his poetry relies on understatement.

Miss Jenkins said, "Japanese poetry is characterized by delicate restraint." She went on to say that the Japanese poet prefers to express himself in a field instead of the entire field, or the foam of the whole world, he attempts to create a whole with a few small details, which led them to develop a method of white painting. Shelley, French symbolist, and surrealist painting are popular when something which is sad is called sad, to the Japanese, it loses appeal. When the impression of sadness is conveyed through an unpainted space, the poem is better appreciated.

She added that Japanese poetry is based on syllable count and that most poets wrote within the thirty-five sixty syllable range, which later developed into the haiku, a form which contains seventeen syllables arranged in three lines of five, seven, and five syllables. The earliest haiku was written in the thirteenth century, but it wasn't until the sixteenth century that haiku became popular. Today, it is a national pastime.

The haiku is a poem of awareness, the reader must try to feel the experience. "The reader," said Miss Jenkins, "must pursue the haiku, attempting to catch the poet's crystallized experience." Miss Jenkins concluded by reading the haiku of different poets, namely, Basho of the early nineteen-teenth century, Issa of the eighteenth century, Issa of the early nineteenth century, and Shiki of the later nineteenth century.

The piercing chill I feel: My dead wife's comb, in our dormitory under my heel..."

Don Brennski is scheduled to speak again next week on Sinclair Lewis' Arrowsmith.

Collegians Embark on Concert Tour; Visit Includes Dutch Farm Country

Following Hilaire Bello's lead "drinking when I had a mind to, singing when I felt inclined to," the Collegians recently foresook clambake for clambake for an evening singing tour. They gave concerts at schools in Sunbury, Meyestown, and Lewisburg. The group is accompanied by John Pittman's lively banjo in a five-piece band. A highlight of their program was a melody of gambling tunes sung by Mr. Richard Chapline.

Since their tour was through the Pennsylvania Dutch country most of the Collegians stayed with farm families who treated them as members of the family. Many of the choruses found some unexpected diversions to make their stay in the country enjoyable, like the farm boys who brought them into their barns and introduced them to milking techniques and Marshall Evans got up early to help the farmer milk his cows. Frank Cohoon who is noticeably hungy, was served an enormous bowl of homemade ice cream and syrup. He was not hungry after he finished it. Mike Rakiewicz a- mused himself playing jacks.

The Lyric Poetry Forum was then held at Johnson's with the following discussion:

"Let there be light."

"And there was light."

"And God saw that it was good."

The discussion continued on the nature of the divine and the concept of creation. The forum was lead by Dr. John Seelye and Dr. John Brown.

Squad Re-Elects Captains

Cheerleaders re-elected for the season are; Lorraine Dyer and co-captain Gall Roberts to lead the squad for the 1965-66 season. Election was April 7th.

The squad, augmented with the newly-coven substitutes Bob Arning, Ray Homan, and Joe Zucco will be introduced at the next Saturday's game.

College Will Receive Television Coverage On Philadelphia Program

"Concept", the award-winning program originating from WRCV-TV in Philadelphia, will focus its camera on the campus during a three-day period in May. Marciacuoco Sheghtal, producer of the show, tells a fact consisting of a look at the changing world of mass communication. He will also pinpoint the usefulness of the Graduate Division and the New Science Research Center in the development of industry.

Although original negotiations, completed last month with the NBC station, arranged for a production crew to start shooting on campus this week, the date was delayed to late May due to the sudden illness of Dr. Parley. A tentative release date of June has been set for this program, which will differ from the Paul Connymph Wilkes College program, which will be broadcast coast to coast in November, 1961, which dealt primarily with campus life.

Alumni to Be President
Fred Davis, alumnus of the Class of 1953, was recently appointed President of the Reading Trust Company making him the youngest bank president in the state. He graduated from the College with a B.S. in Commerce and Finance. He then went on to obtain his Master's in Business Administration at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania in 1954. Davis is a member of the Reading Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Golfers Even Season Log With Win Over Crusaders
Last Tuesday afternoon the golf team evened their season record at 2-2-2 by shutting the Crusaders of Susquehanna University, 13-4-9.

Dr. John Adams, director of the College's Athletics Branch, said "This is a splendid victory for the team and for the College. It gives us a basis for the development of a competitive team in intercollegiate golf."

A part of the team's success was due to the efforts of Paul Pickard, who made the winning putts in the final round.

The team will play at least one more match before the end of the season.

Barons Lose in Playoff Finale; Drop Exciting 132-115 Contest to Jets
The Easton Area Jets justified themselves as the regular season champions by defeating the Wilkes-Barre Barns in the finals of the season playoff.

The Jets took the first game from the Barns by a substantial 144-128 at Allentown to start off the series in the same form they displayed in routine games from the league leadership and taking over the number-one position in the circuit. Upon coming to Wilkes-Barre for the second game of the three-game playoffs, the Jets found a fired up Baron quintet which jumped off to a commanding lead early in the game, but which dwindled later, ending with the Barns taking a 124-120 decision.

With the series deadlocked, Wilkes-Barre made a return trip to Allentown for the deciding game. Walt Simon exploded for the Jets dropping in 45 points in the evening. Wilkes-Barre, hampered by injuries in the playoffs, missed the services of Leroy White, who all season played brilliant defensive ball for Barons. Howie Montgomery came up limping at the end of the first half, further hindering the Barons. Jumping Jack Jackson was high man for the Barns with 33 tallies, but the loss of Wright and Montgomery's mishap proved an unsurmountable obstacle for the Barons.

The Barns first half of the season was disastrous, but the Wilkes-Barre team coalesced into a solid game-winning ball club, turning in the finest second half record in the league. It was indeed fortunate that the Barons' fine surge could not have been carried to a happier conclusion. Still the Barns' fans had much to applaud this season.

Jim Ferris Named as Cage Coach; Replaces Former Mentor Ed Davis

It has been announced recently that Jim Ferris will assume the duties of head basketball coach next year. Ferris will replace Eddie Davis who held the head mentor reins for the past eight seasons.

The move was made, according to athletic director John Reine, because Davis found it impossible to devote enough time to his coaching duties due to job commitments. He is employed by the Souderton Construction Company and his position caused him to miss a good deal each practice season.

Ferris is a Wilkes graduate, Class of 1956. He received his Master’s degree in administration from Bucknell University in 1961. He is currently a mathematics instructor at Kingston High School where he also serves as baseball coach.

He has, for a number of years, been head soccer coach at the College and served as assistant cage coach during the past season.

WANT A VOICE in the people's choice? Don't pass the buck—VOTE!
‘Pop’ Spotlights College in the News

by MIMI Wilson
When one considers that more than thirty-five per cent of the content of today’s newspapers comes from public relations practitioners, according to Professor Scott M. Cutlip of the University of Wisconsin School of Journalism, the growing role of the public relations man (or woman) should concern us. As a natural consequence, the Beacon this week trains its spotlight on the man who is responsible for creating a favorable impression of Wilkes College for thousands of newspaper readers, television viewers and radio listeners. He is Livingston “Pop” Clewell, whose releases stem from Third Floor (rear), Chase Hall.

Enter his office and a huge sign draws your eye to its legend—“Nothing just happens; somebody makes it happen.” Perhaps, this accounts for the initiative that carries the College public relations program full speed ahead, not only on a local level, but throughout the state and elsewhere on a national level. Indication of this drive is best illustrated in the recent college production of Meredith Wilson’s “The Music Man” which played to capacity houses in Irem Temple.

A month before showtime, the press and five radio stations were saturated with promotional releases and spots. Sponsoring the play, the Kiwanis Club of Wilkes-Barre, to raise funds for its Wheelchair Club, sold hundreds of tickets; but as is often the case in ventures of this kind, the public will purchase tickets but often does not attend the performances. This was directly reversed in this instance, due in part to judicious PR promotion.

In his releases about the College, Mr. Clewell strives to solidify a close relationship between Wilkes and the community. He conducts a weekly television show on WBBK TV called “The Wilkes College Capsule” and is also the creator of “Focus,” a student panel discussion program which is heard weekly on radio station WARM. On a community level Pop has integrated his public relations work on a volunteer basis for the United Fund, American Brotherhood Roundtable, Mercy Hospital, and Advertising Club of Wilkes-Barre as well as other organizations. He has received the coveted Irem People’s Award for outstanding work in the public relations field.

A graduate of Blair Academy and Dartmouth College, Mr. Clewell has been actively engaged in the public relations field for over thirty years. He recalls that his first job in the field was as a member of the publicity staff of Sam H. Harris, theatrical producer in New York City. Mr. Clewell has spent some time on the West coast. In Hollywood he wired for a number of motion picture producing companies and notes a few motion pictures to his credit. Moving from the area of motion pictures, he associated himself with the advertising world as an account executive for several advertising agencies in California.

Radio is the medium of communication in which Mr. Clewell has been most active. While on the West coast he began his radio career with radio station KIJI of the Los Angeles Times. Mr. Clewell has also been in radio in Detroit, Daytona Beach as a writer and producer, and was formerly program director at WNAC. He has literally produced hundreds of dramatic programs. His radio adaptation and production of Charles Dickens’ “Christmas Carol” was withdrawn from coast to coast on a national network of stations.

His radio work and his contributions to the technique of radio presentation include the “cold opening,” dramatic writing, the use of voice-talent as the first to effectively use the first person voice approach in dramatic productions.

‘Pop’ Clewell's story about the public relations work he did in Hollywood is a great reminder of the importance of PR in the entertainment industry. It also highlights his versatility and dedication to his craft.
