New Concept In Senior Art Exhibits; 3-Man Show: Williams, Pethick, Yobolnski

by Grace Jones

From February 17 through March 1, Jan Pethick, Bill Williams, and Len Yobolnski will give a three-man art show. The idea of such a show is an entirely new concept to the art department, and its advantages are staggering. These three seniors, and those who followed suit immediately, have the ability to display their work of the last four years, their requirements for the regular Art Fair at Conyngham Annex.

This project proposes two disadvantages for the senior art major: first, Conyng.-
ham Annex is not big enough for such a large exhibit. The second disadvantage, which is a by-product of the first, is that the artists must hang their windows, or perhaps, were they lucky, hang on an important "in-the-way" door at the Annex.

The new idea of separate, three-man shows was sketched out from Conyngham Annex to a newly renovated building behind Weckesser Hall. With more space, the artists are able to hang their work at advantageous spots which will complement rather than detract from it. The public will now be able to examine more carefully than they possibly could the products of four years' concentration and study. There is an added advantage for the artist who prepares for this most important exhibit in four years is assured none of his work will ever be overlooked and all of it will be appreciated.

Seniors Excel On Law Boards; Hansen School Leader With 757

by John Loe

Results of the Law School Admissions Test, taken by ten Wilkes College seniors in November 1962, show that the group did exceptionally well and exceeded all expectations. According to Dr. Hugo Mailey, head of the Political Science Department and director of the 1962 test, Wilkes seniors' score of 757 was the highest marks attained by a Wilkes student this year, placing him among the top one-half percent of all students taking the test.

An indication of how high the over-average is can be obtained from the following statistics. The national mean for 122,342 students who took the test in 1962 was 484. During the same period of time, 1,552 seniors from Wilkes students who took the Boards was 496. These facts illustrate that this year's group is a little better than the College's eight-year average.

The seniors who took the Admissions Test are: Richard Burns, Walter Dexter, Alan Dozer, Jeff Gallet, Malcolm Hensan, and James Hensan. Others are Leonard Koerner, Alan Krieger, Michael Landeman, and Jeff Raschal.

Debaters Take Two In Garvey Tourney

The College varsity debate team recently gained two wins and two ties out of six rounds of debate in the Garvey Invitational Tournament at King's College. The team, consisting of Rosamary Rush and Al Airola, the veterans, defeated Brooklyn College and Trenton State. They tied with Rose-men and Fordham University.

On Friday evening, after three rounds of debate, all debaters attended a mixer in the Lyceum Room at King's. At this time, coaches were entertained at a reception in the Faculty Dining Hall.

Presentation of awards at a 2 o'clock tea concluded the tournament.

Len Yobolnski, Bill Williams, and Jan Pethick discuss plans for exhibiting works.

Pethick, Williams, and Yobolnski have already exhibited at Scranton, Wilkes-Barre, Philadelphia, and New York. Under the advisement of T. Phillip Richards, the artists will display their oils, water colors, sculpture, pastel, and other media.

The college and community are cordially invited to attend this promising and refreshing exhibit.

This fund is granted from the contingency fund.

Hall Presents Theory On Human Catalyst

John B. Hall, spoke at the Forum on Tuesday, Feb. 11, on the theory of the Human Catalyst. He based his theory, to a large extent, on what he had observed about people and on his own personal experience.

Hall differentiated between chemical and human catalysts by calling the former objective and the latter subjective. The human catalyst is a stimulus which initiates, accelerates, or decreases human reactions. The stimulus may very possibly be changed in the reaction.

Catalysts, or influences, have been responsible for man's evolution to his present state. All animals which can receive stimuli can be influenced. Man's responses to stimuli are colored by what he has termed the "warp humanity." This warp consists of from the individual's, the individual's, emotional responses, the emotions of the individual. All influences, in passing through this warp," are transformed to correspond to the person's basic personality. Many transformations will be made common, due to man's biological and psychological social life. Social changes and from the common transformations may be regarded as important.

Discussion followed the talk. The Forum will meet next Tuesday at eight o'clock in Chapman Hall.

Seniors' Advantages

There are probably many students on this campus who are unaware of some of the student political movements which are active in this country. Perhaps the most effective ones don’t receive front page attention.

One such political group is the National Student Association which because of its continual leftist leanings is being abandoned by many schools of national prominence. ETSU is not a member of NSA but holds membership in the Southern University Student Government Association. Although it may be well for State students to know some of the goals and proposals this organization has made. These resolutions include:

1. Defense of Japanese student rioting against former President Eisenhowe.
2. Praise for Fidel Castro’s educational reforms — and earlier condemnation of the Batista Government for suppression of academic freedom.
3. Recommendations that the House Un-American Activities Committee be abolished.
4. Opposition to loyalty oaths for students receiving federal loans.
5. Criticism of U. S. and anti-Communist allies as Spain and Portugal.
6. Calls for repeal of the McCarran-Walter Act, which regulates Red activities in the U. S.
7. Protests against the firing of Communist teachers.
8. Denunciation of U. S. measures to achieve nuclear superiority.
10. Condemnation of the resumption of nuclear testing (1962, prior to the ban treaty).

Virginia Military Institute which recently dropped from the rolls of NSA reported in the school paper that NSA wishes to see the slow move to the socialistic status for the United States, complete political recognition of Cuba, admission of Red China to the UN, and other equally radical measures...

This is the group which supposedly represents the students of America. Recently in regard to the number of schools renouncing NSA, the group changed the wording of its constitution to a "instead of the national student organization."

These thoughts are intended to inform, not to create meaningless controversy on a campus relatively free from political turmoil. Students are being used for ulterior motives in a great many areas and many former NSA schools are aware of this.

Editors note: The foregoing is an editorial, reprinted from the "Collegian," student newspaper of East Tennessee State University, on a subject too few students and faculty will ask about.

In the same issue, the Collegian listed 31 Colleges which had withdrawn from NSA since 1961.

THE BALLOT BOX

WILL IT DEMOCRATICALLY

by Jeff Galler

Each year at the end of the spring semester, the Student Government Committee will have the opportunity of having its officers elected popularly. Each year it is decided that this is too late to make adjustments and the project is put off. Somewhere the new Student Government administration never follows through on the project, and it is again too late.

Presently, the officers of the Student Government are chosen by the Student Government itself. The president of the student body is chosen by twelve members of the new Student Government each spring (the new freshman representative is not chosen until the fall). Needless to say, this leads to backbiting and smoke-filled room politicking. This system should be changed. The officers of the student body should be elected by the student body.

Opponents of popular election say that direct election of Student Government officers would simply be a popularity contest. I can’t go along with this view. To say that a college student does not have the ability to choose his own leaders is not logical. To carry this theory to its natural conclusion would mean voiding the nation’s elections and allowing a small oligarchic group to choose our leaders from among its own members. This is the way we are told it should be done among the intellectually superior, i.e., the college students.

I reject the idea that either the student body or the nation is incapable of choosing its leaders through the democratic process. I reject the idea that a group of twelve people, eight of whom the individual has never voted, must make the choice.

Presently the Student Government has a committee studying its constitution. The committee, under the leadership of Rich Shemo, is a singularly able group. I hope that this group, in the near future, will submit to the Student Government calling for popular election this year. I hope that the members of student government, acting as representatives of the student body rather than as guardians of their own personal views, will pass this amendment and put to the student body early enough so that we can have a truly democratic Student Government election this year.

Massachusetts has its Kennedys, Texas has its Johnsons, and New York has its Rockefeller’s, however, only Arizona has Barry Goldwater.

Senator Barry Goldwater is now the hottest contender for the G.O.P. presidential nomination, and we Goldwater people are going to get our man in the White House. We believe in Mr. Goldwater because we feel, as he does, that great changes are needed in our government and America is in need of a free nation.

Foreign Policy Criticized

Vital and important is our present foreign policy regarding the U.S.S.R. Why is it that the Soviet Union seems to see the plays while the United States struggles with the problem of peace in Europe, for example?

Senator Goldwater proposes with withdrawal of recognition of the Soviet Union as a solution. However, it must be understood that withdrawal of recognition does not mean that he wishes to parley with the enemy — it means that he will have some standards that we must live up to. We must focus on the future and what is right. We must ensure that the Soviet threat becomes a thing of the past.

Let us look at Senator Goldwater’s views on civil rights. Mr. Goldwater knows what is right and he is not prepared to abuse the rights of others. He is not prepared to impose his judgment on the states by attempting to force the states to do what they should do to maintain a strong nation.

A Conservative

STUDENT GOVERNMENT ACCEPTS CHALLENGE

We heard! We heard! The Student Government, meet-arounders of the Square table, does this fourteenth day of February in the year of nineteen sixty-one and sixty-four, accept the challenge of Lady Barbara of Brunswick and her court to a feast of touch (no physical contact) football games. Let us see who the Steel (guillotine) is mightier than the pen.

EASTER CANDY

The Women’s Chorus is selling Easter candy every day in the Cafe and the Student Bar. Candy may also be bought from individual members.

Red Gov. in Education

Nowhere in the Constitution is there a clause designating the field of education to the Federal Government, nor is there a clause which gives the Federal Government the right to regulate the field of education.

How then does our government justify the use of federal troops present in Southern states when integration is attempted in school? We believe with Senator Goldwater that the government’s power in this matter should be settled by the states, and not interfered with by the Federal Government. Education is a complex, an exclusive state right that needs to be left alone. Excluding violence, we believe a state’s efforts to solve the problem of civil rights with civil struggle with civil rights ought to be supported rather than interfered with by the Federal Government.
ARTISTIC ACHIEVEMENT

Two Interpretations Possible
For Bergman’s “Wild Strawberries”

by Mrs. Anna V. Kish

Wild Strawberries, the manuscript’s film presentation on February 7, was another artistic achievement of the Swedish director, Ingmar Bergman, whose past efforts have been much_touted but seldom understood. However, any one attending this motion picture with the expectation of being misunderstood must have been disappointed, for there is nothing obscure in the action or the theme. To be sure there are the usual Bergman touches in the use of symbolism, in the Kibbo-Kinkel drama, and in the startlingly effective chiaroscuro photography, but these enhance rather than interfere with the story.

The story is simple. It concerns the seventy-six-year-old Doctor Borg, who, accompanied by his daughter-in-law, is traveling to a distant university where he is to receive an honorary degree for his contributions to the study of medicine. It appears to be present in the physician’s life, which Borg has been on the edge of centering and that however he might have benefited mankind, he was, in his god-like detachment, the most to him.

There is none of the half-real half-dream atmosphere so often used in modern films. We are not only aware when the doctor is dreaming and a film is in a dream, but the entire autobiography, as its blood pours into the street; then, Awake, he sees himself as lonely, empty, dead though alive.

Don’t Sacrifice Present

The dream spurs his reminiscences during the journey, and memories combine with present incidents to form more dreams. It is in these dream sequences that Bergman’s masterful directing is especially evident as he captures the peculiar reality of dreams, complete with symbols, conversations, and experiences both pleasant and painful. But even in the dreams we are kept aware of the present, for we see the doctor always old, witnessing a past in which he has played a most detached role, failing as a lover, a husband, a father, and finally even as a doctor.

Real Characters Add Much

In the world of reality there are the passengers whom the doctor has picked up—a middle-aged couple whose vituperative dialogue might have been the model for that in Albee’s Who’s Afraid of Virginia Woolf, and three wild but lovable teenagers whose boldness and lack of inhibition is both shocking and refreshing. These characters later appear in his dreams, which reveal in his memory of a childhood sweethearts picking wild strawberries, his failure as a lover. He refused to partake of life and so lost her. He fails as a husband, for he remains above his more humanly involved wife—as she put it, “like God,” understanding but aloof. Between the dreams of his daughter-in-law accuses him of responsibility for the estrangement between her and her husband, a cold, unsympathetic materialistic man, the doctor’s father. Once again in the dream world, he fails both a philosophical and practical examination given to him as a doctor. He has forgotten that the first law of a doctor is “to ask forgiveness,” and he presents as dead a woman who is really alive. After this self-realization, there is an optimistic note as he determines to become a more human being and moves into the tranquility of old age.

Although Bergman’s films often raise disturbing questions which are left unanswered, Wild Strawberries, instead, reveals an answer in its insistence on the importance of the human heart involving itself in life.

Other Interpretation Possible

There is, of course, the possibility of an allegorical interpretation, but from this point of view the most reasonable course to follow is one which uses the characters to symbolize generations. In this way, the old doctor represents the older generation, which, concerned with work and scientific accomplishment, has neglected to develop the human qualities of its children (the estranged couple and the fate-filled couple), who emerge as robots or animals sans faith, sans love. The present generation, upon whom the future of any nation depends, is significantly leaving behind the older generation as the interpretation may seem, the theme which concerns the human heart seems much more important when it is applied to a human being rather than to the state.

Wild Strawberries, then, is not confusing; it is relatively simple (for Bergman), but undeniably significant in our time.

Our Boy Barry

Barbering holds the stand on the civil rights issue will undoubtedly throw support behind him. But this is not the Senator’s main object. His views are unquestionably correct and constitutionally backed. However, gaining Southern support certainly won’t change chances of winning the Republican nomination.

The United States is basically a country of white people, and there is a good possibility of a conservative victory within the ranks of the G.O.P. The country and its white people have their chance with little success. It is time to accept the startling political facts and to wish to preserve personal liberty and overcome every obstacle to the growth of individual freedom.

Marauders Dumped In 19-9 Thriller As Wilkes Takes Two In Row

Tonight night, the wrestling coach John Reese take on the Lycoming Warriors in one of the toughest meets Wilkes has faced all season. Last Saturday, the Colonels brought their season log to 3-1 by downing Millersville 19-9. In winning, the Wilkes team averaged last season a 19-13 upset by the Marauders. The victory was the first in two years over Millersville as the 1963 encounter ended in a 14-14 deadlock. Wilkes had to fight with the stubborn Marauders for the victory, however, as Millersville rebounded after losing the first two bouts to take the lead 9-6. All three of Wilkes' realize marked final 3 matches, however, to take the meet.

Wilkes' only loss came at the hands of East Stroudsburg, and Lycoming appears to be another powerful foe. Wilkes will have to be on its toes with John Gardner on the ineligibility list. Gardner was the only Colonel victor as the Warriors double latest 21-3. Lycoming finished 2-2 after the year, while the Colonels dropped to 2-4.

The meet starts at 7, with the basketball team meeting Upsala in the second contest of the doubleheader.

Hearts Earns Beacon Laurels for Stellar Showing On Mats

by Ivor Smith

Wrestling is the sport Dave Hall excels in, and for this reason the Beacon selects him 'Athlete of the Week.' Dave is a freshman from Wyoming Seminary, and a product of Wyoming Seminary. He is a liberal arts major and is slightly undecided about his future plans.

The wrestling team is having a winning season and Dave has been a definite asset to the squad. He has wrestled in all the meets, posting four wins, three by pin, one tie, and one sole loss. Dave can also handle himself significantly in higher weight classes than his own. His regular weight class is 157-pounds, but he has gained accolades in the 167-pound and 177-pound classes. In a meet against Moravian, he wrestled and defeated a heavier adversary.

Dave attended Wyoming Seminary where he entered letters in wrestling and baseball. In the Lehigh Valley Wrestling Tourney he was third in the 147-pound class. Hunting, trapping, and fishing are some of his other interests. When baseball season comes, Dave expects to try out for the team.

Early predictions of the wrestling team's possibilities were gloomy, but freshmen like Dave Hall and the rest of the team have shown great promise for coach John Reese.

The freshman wrestler feels Dave Hall is an all around athlete, deserving of this acclaim for his efforts. The wrestling team, and extends their congratulations to him.

Gore Hall now has an unblemished record in four games and shares the top spot in the dome league with Butler Hall.

In the National League the Trojans took a half-time lead of 29-12 over the Marauders. The Colonels led an easy 58-41 victory. Kozier paced the winners with 26 and Chaney was high with 17.

The Astronauts finally hit the win column by beating the Collegiana 28-19. Kuzmich and Kachinski did all the scoring for the Astronauts. What was primarily a defensive battle.

WILKES MERFEN Gain Second Win; Upset M.S.C. In Tight Contest

Ken Young, coach of the swimming team, predicted an improvement in the squad this year and the Colonel tankmen have come through. Last Saturday, Wilkes upset the Marauders of Millersville State 50-45 in the CAC. The Colonels have a 2-3 record, with one of the losses a 48-47 heartbreaker to Harpur.

Captain Jack Barnes and Harry Heesch, a freshman who was named 'Athlete of the Week' last issue, have each set two new school records. In addition, Barnes is part of the record setting 400-yard freestyle relay team which also consists of Mike Scholty, Ron Daggett, and Jon Carras.

Marauders were disqualified in the 400-yard medley relay, and Heesch and Carras took 1st and 2nd in the 200-yard freestyle to give Wilkes the early lead. Marauders vied to take the 500-yard freestyle and 200-yard breaststroke which left the meet to be decided in the final event, the 400-yard freestyle relay. The Wilkes team turned on the steam to set the new school record and win the meet.
