Christmas Message

In the stress of our times and in the midst of duress in international affairs, we sometimes fail to remind ourselves of the great spiritual values upon which our whole social, economic, and political system is based.

At this Christmas time, I hope that all of you may gain some of the warmth and understanding that is so much needed in this world today.

Mrs. Farley joins me in wishing you a happy and profitable Christmas period.

Eugene Farley
Fundamental Principles of Right Must Not Yield To Political Power

Dr. Harold W. Thatcher, Chairman, history department

The self-styled "realists" among our political scientists and policy makers tell us that it is foolish to attempt to base a foreign policy on moral criteria to our country's actions in its relations with other nations. They believe that only power counts; hence they insist on continuing to play in the Atomic Age the same game that was played in the 19th century.

I happen to disagree with this view. I prefer to align myself with the great American philosopher, William Ernest Hocking, who once said: "The fundamental principle of right is the same for states as for individuals... and with the same absolute authority, and all their same infallible sword shall perish with the sword." I believe that if we continue, in the Atomic Age, to place our greatest faith in power politics with complete disregard for morality, we shall only meet with further disaster, not only to ourselves, but to the world and the ultimate disaster - the elimination of the human race from this earth. It is for this reason that I shall attempt to present arguments indicating that accepted moral standards are valid for the various phases of the foreign policy of our nation since the inception of the Cold War.

As a background for this discussion it may be pointed out that during the Middle Ages, the Church, in an attempt to develop the doctrine of force, developed the doctrine of just war. Just war was defined as income to kill the pope's enemies, or to defend the church against attack by heretics.

Another criterion developed during the Middle Ages for judging the "justness" of a war concerned the end and the means. Even against the most unmeritorious enemy, it was said, defense is not attempted by evil or monstrous means.

Keeping these criteria in mind, let us examine certain aspects of American foreign policy. On the subject of this point in 1951 brought about an impasse and resulted in the breakdown of the preparatory conference.

More recently we have repeatedly rejected Russian proposals that a non-aggression peace be negotiated between the Warsaw Pact nations and NATO, putting forth as our chief reason (as noted by the New York Times, August 18, 1953) "the argument that the Warsaw Pact and the Atlantic Alliance 'cannot be put on the same level.' What could be more coldly self-righteous than this 'holier-than-thou' attitude? And what could be more hypocritical than our unceasing denunciation of the U.S.S.R. for its refusal to release its hold on the 'satellite' states (which concerns essential for its own security), when for the same reason we refuse to release our hold on Okinawa and other former Japanese islands in the Ryukus and Bonin groups in spite of repeated requests, and even petitions to the United Nations, by the inhabitants of these islands that they be permitted to return to the rule of Japan? Shouldn't the Russians have a right to such demands as the Japanese have made, and that we ourselves could only make in Vietnam, where we are the only nation that has intervened militarily?

If you haven't made your visit yet, here are a few instructions:

1. Ask him how he gets from store to store.
2. Do not kiss him on the lips.
3. Bounce on his knees, especially if you weigh more than 200 pounds.
4. Ask him why he has white hair with black roots.
5. Don't punch him in the stomach - feathers might fly out.

In concluding, let me revert to that most immoral act of all, the use of nuclear weapons, and the population and the elimination of whole societies, which our theories failed to condemn. But we have already expressed our willingness to use "if driven to it." If the worst comes to the worst, it would be better, I submit, that our nation perish in honor than for it to endure for ages with our collective soul burdened by the thought that its destruction was brought about by God.

Vacation Bound Students Make a Final Pler to Santa for Their Christmas Wishes

Santa Claus, that lovable bearded fellow who will be dodging 33,525, just one week, unassailably receives with the same love, he never knew of, those heard from some of the College students. Who else could possess such imaginations?

William J. Barth: A subscription to the American Bar Association Journal.

Irene Norwid: Another photographer for the Beacon so that I can have a date once in awhile.

Janet Keenan: A suitcase, a transfer average, and a full tuition to the Boston Store.

George Bakley: A quickie at 4 o'clock.

Edward Katzenisky: A reserved parking space in the parking lot.

Barbara Walters: A hors-kart and knife and directions on how to use it or a new brain.

Dusty Miller: My one and only. Itwalks, it talks, 36-24-ummm-mm.

No one has ever been seen buying a new car or a new car at the Boston Store.

Jim Unisko: A guarantee that I'll graduate from Wilke.

Don Auss: Another of Santa's little helpers to get me a "B" average.

July Mogden: Another week to read Anna Karenina.

Irv Lewohn: A girlfriend.

H. H. Williamson: Who's Santa?

Dave Cowan: Cathy DeAngelis.

Tony Rapp: A nonogrammed (12-6-20).

John Ferguson: A 4.0 average.

Leigh Goodson: Money, but don't spend too much.

Chuck Robins: A round trip airline ticket to Houston, Texas.

Margaret Klotz: Sleep.

John Michay: Cigarettes.

Jim Smith: Relief from Spanish flu.

Don Reeser: A National Defense Loan.

Susan Kanner: Two-truck car.

Patricia Fred: Piano.

Bob Thomas: A new car or a new car at the Boston Store.

Have Brush, Palette — Will Exhibit

by Irene Norton

"Exhibit '64," the first senior art exhibit of this year, is being held in Coungey Annex all week, as a conclusion to the semester. Among the media on display are oils, watercolors, graphics, ceramics, and sculptures, all of which are offered for sale. Seniors representing the exhibit are William Davis, Charlotte Levensonite, and Marilyn Thomas.

Davis first showed his interest in art when he was a junior in high school. He has had work exhibited in oils and water colors, his favorite medium, and has no future plans to include teaching art.

Thomas became interested in art through her work on high school productions. Although her favorite medium is oil, her exhibits also contain graphics and ceramics. Her work has been displayed in the Fine Arts Festival on Public Square and in other regional art exhibits. Her future plans today.

Swivel-Chaired Santa Finds Solace

In Recalling Rudolph When He "Reined"

by Barbara Sassen

"One thing about being Santa Claus in this day and age," said the fat little man in the grey business suit, "it's not the same as it used to be, no sir!" The fat little man was Santa himself; he was sitting in his Danish-modern office behind a mammoth polished-walnut desk, his back to a huge picture window.

On the desk were three bright red phones, a green ashtray with an oval, much-used meerschaum pipe resting on it. He had a bag and holder, a battery-operated dreaming bear, a fedora, worn wooden soldier, and a small vase with a single sprig of holly in it. Through the picture window could be seen a compound of factory buildings covered with snow, and beyond those, stable, also covered with snow, and beyond those, more snow, and snowing, and snowing.

During this time a person walked past the window, and Santa continued, "Just look at those buildings. That's what's been made of what is used to be a fifty-man toyshop. I don't even know all my elves anymore.

He swiveled around to the desk again. His long white beard twitched as he added, "I don't know myself, but my elves don't tell me that. The rest of the world which we work with is an original five. It is just the rush season that helps that I don't really know too well."

Then when such an event as this came, he added, "We sure do. We can't spend the week through the year because we have too many different habits want Santa. Certain things like clocks and teakettles, vases, count on us; we can't get them. But the rest, we have to wait for the little ones to write their letters. My goodness, but we get mail! We have fifty secretaries sorting mail full time from December tenth on. Of course I still like to go down and talk to the kiddies once in awhile to read some of those letters for myself, I sure do miss that reading some of the letters."

The Wednesday of this week, the afternoon of that day, Santa swiveled around to the room, and Santa continued, "If you don't mind, I tell you.

Picking up the old meerschaum carefully, he emptied and then refilled it, placed it in his mouth, lit it, and puffed away contently as the fragrant smoke filled the air.

"Have to tell you about old Rudolph, though," he said, picking up his story. "We don't really need him anymore for guiding the sleigh. We've had headlights installed on it. Much better for tricky landings on those slippery rooftops. We keep Rudolph for two reasons — tradition's sake and as a warning light for low-flying airplanes. We have to let them know now long the team is.

Santa still wears his famous red suit, "but only on deliveries. And now I wear cotton-dacron long-johns instead of those picky woolen ones Mrs. Claus used to make me wear. They're a lot warmer than the old ones, too," he added with a wist. "Most of the time it's a business suit for me, though, and if you think I look odd with a coat and a long white beard, you should see my elves in blue facutry uniforms."

Santa's plans for the next year include possibly a training school for department store and street corner Santas. "Sometimes I'm embarrassed to think that some of those skinny little fellows are trying to pass as me. At least we could teach 'em how to smoke the right way.

"We're also thinking of branching out into decorations. You know, wreaths, tinsel things, like that."

In the distant future, Santa would like to "really get big and consolidate with the Easter Bunny and the Great Pumpkin. Might as well go all the way, y'know."

As the story goes, Santa Claus is like being a big business executive these days, and sometimes I get weary of it. But come Christmas Eve, and it's all worth it, just thinking of all those kids.

When asked how he manages to get so many toys to so many kids at Christmas time, he adds, "Just let me tell you a secret. You see, Santa sausage filling in a big meatball."

This bright-eyed blonde is Alekza Pownleak, of 103 Woodland Drive, Kingston, Pa. Miss Pownleak, a sophomore elementary education major, was chosen to be Miss December in the Miss Seasons Contest.

Sophomore Chosen Miss December

According to President Tom Trusko, the Lettermen's Formal held last Friday night at the Manhattan Ballroom was an overwhelming success. Approximately seventy couples attended the affair.

The theme, "Wonderland in White," was depicted in the decorations. In the center of the floor was a huge Christmas tree, cut and decorated by the Lettermen. The centerpieces for each table consisted of white birch logs decorated with pine boughs and blue candlesticks. The night's refreshments were cookies and punch. The leftovers were donated to the Jewish Community Center to be sent to orphans who are supported by the Center.

ACCOUNTING MAJORS

PLACED IN 8 FIRMS

by Patty Clark

 Twelve senior accounting majors have been placed in accounting firms throughout the country to serve their seven-week internships. annunciating Robert Capin of the accounting department. Dear Editor:

I wish to compliment the individual who had the intelligence to attack a real problem. No Cigarettes!!!

I have been forced to walk to the \( Y \) joint and back for my \( Y \) smoke. In addition, I have tossed countless cigarettes to individuals who have neglected to stock up before entering the Union of Wilkes College. At the same time, I have enlightened myself and solved the obvious shortcomings before we take on national and international problems.

Has Miss Gov't. Become Apathy's Greatest Toll?

Dear Editor:

I was quite concerned by the contents of your last week's editorial. I have been student teaching this semester, and thus, too aware of events on campus, not to mention the Management Film; as such, the second showing was the more convenient for me. The audience numbered roughly thirty.

The following week when I read a copy of the Beacon, I found that due to mis-governance in the Economics Club and Miss Magazine in SG, I nearly missed seeing the movie. I do not want to believe that Cathy DeAngelis was canceling the showing of "a movie" because it was "not what we wanted" into ignoring the interests of many; she would not consult a few and not care about the rest. Nor can I see how ironic it would be if, after four years of tirades, she above all, has become apathetic.

WRITER DEMANDS APOLOGY OF BLASPHEOUS EDITOR

Dear Editor:

I think you gave your Econ Club a bad name. I was there at the dance and it wasn't too bad. They tried hard. You had no right to mention Woggen's Chorus. They tried to do something with the dance. Their name wasn't even on the tickets. They were there only to help work.

When I got there, this guy I know from King's was outside selling $1.00 tickets to the dance. If the Women's Chorus were helping sell tickets too, but they were charging $1.25.

You said the band cost $500 but that is another of your errors. Everybody was there, girls and boys. We had tickets sold only for an hour. But the Econ Club got some kids who were there to feed the machines, they didn't get any money but at least we had some music.

And another thing. You inferred that some of the guys on the slantly spoke of the project. IDC is apolitical, and we try to include all. The members of IDC are nowhere to be found, all the money was going to the students.

So me and some of my friends from high school who had a real good time think you owe our Econ Club an apology.

The program is designed to expose candidates to all important facets of the study and work in the field. The deadlines for applications are:

- Graduate assistantships above $3,000
  - Applications: May 15
- Graduate assistantships below $3,000
  - Applications: June 1
- Undergraduate fellowships ranging up to $1,000
  - Applications: June 1
- Graduate fellowships ranging up to $3,000
  - Applications: June 1
- Graduate fellowships ranging up to $5,000
  - Applications: June 1

The top post is the president who is involved in the management of the college and the internal operations. The subject may be referred to the president, or the executive committee to the president, or the executive committee to the proper committee.

The funds for the running expenses of the College are derived from various sources: endowments, from student tuition and fees, and from gifts and bequests. The College is in a state of growth from its comparatively recent beginnings, and these sources will be expanding in the years to come. In addition, new methods are always being explored to increase income under the domination or influence of the College.

The atmosphere of Christmas pervades the campus. Wreaths decorate the outside of the dorms and Commons. Each of the dorms have Christmas trees, many of which can be seen through the windows. An added feature this year is a Christmas tree on the lawn between Chase and Kirby Halls. The Public Relations Office has provided music in the cafeteria. On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings dorm students exchanged gifts and Santa Claus came to visit. Women dormitory students continued playing "angels" for each other. For seven days each girl received surprises from her anonymous "angel." When presents were exchanged, the "angels" discovered the identity of their "Suzie Snowflakes.

Last Thursday afternoon, the men and women from local homes for the aged were feted by the women of T.D. and the women playing Santa Claus. The evening's agenda also included a festive decor, refreshments, a band, dancing and caroling. Dr. and Mrs. Farley will entertain the staff of the various offices on campus at a luncheon in the Commons. Dr. and Mrs. Farley will also conclude formal activities in the evening at a party for faculty and administration members, trustees, and their wives and husbands.
WILKES TOURNEY CONTINUES RAPID GROWTH RATE

The photo at the left brings a sigh of nostalgia from those who remember the "Wrestling Clinic" for high school wrestlers and coaches which was once a part of the Wilkes Open Wrestling Tournament.

The "Rose Bowl of Wrestling", since the photo was taken, has mushroomed into the largest tournament of its kind anywhere. Due to the continued rise in attendance, the clinic had to be dropped in order to complete the bouts scheduled for the competition.

Letter to the Editor

Dear Editor:

This letter is in reference to an article appearing in your school paper, covering a soccer game between Wilkes College and Stevens Institute of Technology. The column appeared on November 13, 1964 and was headlined "Booers down Stevens Trade".

Referring to Stevens Institute of Technology as a trade school must have been a typographical error as no one in the main stream of collegiate journalism could have had such a misconception.

Stevens Institute of Technology, as the name clearly implies, is a college devoted to the education of professional men who plan careers in science and engineering. The basic curriculum is intended to produce man who can adapt to a wide variety of circumstances through the breadth of his understanding of natural forces. It is but a step from this conception to the recognition that the modern scientist or engineer, if he is to meet the responsibilities of his professional status, must understand not only the management of physical forces by man, but a good deal about his interaction with other men and with the institutions of society.

I think the difference between a trade school and an engineering college should now be quite obvious, and I would appreciate your rectifying the error, as it offends many Stevens men, both alumni and undergraduates.

Sincerely,

Lawrence J. Halzenthaler

WRESTLERS LOSE FIRST TO ITHACA IN 10 YEAR SPAN

by Wayne Bloomberg

The Wilkes men lost the opening game of the 1965-65 season to the Ithaca Bombers at Ithaca last Saturday. The Bombers were one of the most closely contested and closely fought contests in the history of wrestling at Wilkes. Ithaca’s win over the Colonels was the first time in ten years that Ithaca was able to defeat Wilkes.

The Bombers were led by one point going into the final match. Heavyweight Bill Tinney was called to the mat and Ithaca gave the extra point needed to tie the match. Each team received 2 points from the team score and Ithaca won 15-14.

Cagers and Wrestlers Lose

COLONEL FIVE DROPS TWO IN POSTING 0-5 LOG

The Colonel cage team lost two contests recently to Lycoming and Juniata, bringing the Wilkes log to a deficient 0-5.

Lycoming led Wilkes throughout the game, triumphing at the finish 81-70. Wilkes trailed at the half, 41-32. The Colonels trailed the Warriors on the court making 29 goals to the Warriors’ 30. Wilkes put in 12 of 23 foul shots while Lycoming hit 21 of 23 attempts.

Four men for the Warriors hit double figures, with Ed Trams high with 25 points. Hugh for Wilkes were Dale Nicholson and Jim Smith with 16 each.

Wilkes gave a great effort in the Juniata, but succumbed to the Indians’ superior scoring attempts. Wilkes trailed 38-32 at the half and the Colonels were unable to overcome that deficit, losing 73-66.

Joe Chanecka played a good game and was game high with 19 points. Dale Nicholson and Jim Smith also hit double figures for the Colonels. Wilkes made 22 of 34 foul shots while Juniata hit 21 of 31.

Pre-season scouting reports show that Michigan is favored to win the N.C.A.A. crown in March. Other favorites on a sectional basis are as follows.

East — Independent: Villanova, St. John’s, Syracuse, N.Y.U. Ivy, Princeton, Penn, M.A.C./Temple, St. Joseph’s, Oklahoma, Rhode Island.

South — Independent: Miami (Fla.), Georgia Tech, Southern, Davidson, West Virginia, Southeastern, Vanderbilt, Kentucky, Atlantic Coast (North Carolina, Duke, Ohio Valley, Eastern Kentucky.

Midwest — Independent: Notre Dame, Dayton, Big Ten, Michigan, Minnesota, Mid-American (Ohio), Ohio.

Prairie States — Independent: Oklahoma City, Missouri Valley, Wichita, St. Louis, Big Eight, Kansas, Oklahoma State.

Southwest — Independent: Utah, Texas Western, Southwest, Texas Tech, Texas & M. Western, Brigham Young, Wyoming.

A review of last week's cage action shows Nebraska upsetting Michigan by one point, Evansville stopped unbeaten Notre Dame, while Wichita capped three straight wins. Penn State stopped highly rated Kansas and Kansas State. Princeton led by Bill Bradley, picked up two wins.

Pre-season favorites Brigham Young and Syracuse suffered double defeats, and St. Joseph’s of Philadelphia began to emerge into the national spotlight by winning two games.

Other major upsets occurred when St. Louis and Vanderbilt went down to defeat on Saturday night.
