The Center for the Performing Arts, designed with the student in mind, will be dedicated on October 25. At 4:30 p.m. Al Groh, College theatrical director, has evaluated the structure as one of the best-equipped theaters of its kind on any college campus. Paul Green, playwright and director of the Clawling Players, will be principal speaker at the ceremony. Speaking at the dedication will be Donald Oenslager, a member of the faculty of Yale University and stage designer for the New York City and Kennedy Art Center in Washington, D. C.

Oenslager has worked closely with Mr. Groh in determining specifications for stage and lighting at the theater. Leigh Allen, renowned designer and decorator, is responsible for much of the decor, interior design, and furnishings.

Between the two entrance doors, on the fourth wall of the glass enclosing four stories, the interior of the theater, hangs a medieval tapestry, imported from Germany, reflective of the culture by which it was inspired. The theater, designed especially for the Center.

The walls of the main auditorium are clad in gold fabric, imprinted with a design modernized by Allen. The ceiling is shines in a semi-arena, with no seat bringing farther than 30 feet from the proscenium, even though the gridiron over the stage is 50 feet in height. Says Mr. Groh, “The concept has been made to transfer to the new center, the interior quality that prevailed in Chace Theatre.”

Three Blue Ceilings

The tiers of box seats lie beneath three drop ceilings, each a different shade of blue. The circular front of the stage consists of a lift platform which can be used as an orchestra pit or, if elevated to maximum height, as part of the stage itself.

Wall-to-wall carpeting, designed by Allen, is featured throughout the Center. Seven cut-glass, crystal chandeliers, a product of the same designer, hang over the two stair wells and elsewhere throughout the theater.

The lower level consists of a large chorus room, containing full wall mirrors, to be used as a rehearsal hall or a make-up and costume room. Large groups. The level also has individual dressing rooms, a guest dressing room equipped with a shower, a kitchen and sewing room, fully-tilted rest rooms. The Green Room, the scene of future conferences, meetings, and lounging, features vinyl wall covering, wall-to-wall carpeting, furniture especially manufactured for the College by the Kanza Corporation.

Century Lighting had built custom equipment for the theater. The pro- vision booth contains a ten-scene preset electronic control panel board.

Sundry types of performances can be accomplished in the theater, drama, music, concerts, solo acts, motion pictures, and art exhibits.

The first dedication dinner will be held on October 31, the Walter Barre Ballet Guild will perform in honor of the theater. Joana Mieschwitz’s created walk to be featured and the performance of ‘The Sound of Music’ will be presented.

Challenging Program

To meet the challenge of the new building, Mr. Groh is in the process of selecting a challenging program for the students. He forces the performance of a set of one-act plays in December and the accomplishment of several major productions during the spring semester.

Since music, art, and drama are joint majors, the students of each will be joined physically by additions to the fine arts complex within the center. The Center for the Performing Arts, a million-dollar structure whoseDone wish to remain to the drama, music, and arts departments, has been designed and also special summer program. His aim is to enable students to participate in the theater, to enjoy and appreciate it.

It is hoped that the theater will be able to continue to be this year, words spoken by Robert Edmond Jones in The Dramatic Imagination. "Keep in your souls images of magnificence."

U.S. in VIET NAM—TOTAL VICTORY?

Walter Narcum

Many people have been asking the question: "Are we winning in Viet Nam?" There is, however, another question, one which is to which would be more to the point. That question is: "Are we winning a war against Viet Nam?" To answer the latter question, we must look at the tactics the U.S. is using in the war in Viet Nam.

The most controversial tactic is our continued bombing of North Viet Nam. Since the first bombing of North Viet Nam took place after successive American defeats in the Vietnam Theater by Seventh Fleet, which were patrolling the Tonkin Gulf. We are the ones who demanded retaliation by units of the South Vietnamese Air Force and of the United States Navy. This time the bombing was not stopped, but instead has continued until the present time, in retaliation of continued infiltrations of North Vietnamese army units.

The continued bombing of North Viet Nam may be used to credibly state that United States is making a concerted effort to win the war in Viet Nam. However, it is not at all of North Viet Nam is under attack by United States' planes. Harpoon, the harbor for Hanoi, have never come under attack by United States' planes. How can we say that we are doing everything to win in Viet Nam, when the complex and population center in North Viet Nam is allowed to be unprotected? We should be willing to win, a review of this 'privileged sanctuary' policy must be made.

A look at the ground in Viet Nam shows that we now have something to be proud of in North Viet Nam. Previously, our servicemen were allowed to act only as advisors to South Vietnamese combat forces. Recently, our forces have been given the go ahead to initiate 'clear and secure' operations on their own, either independently or in conjunction with South Vietnamese units. The continued bombing of North Viet Nam was a step toward total victory in Viet Nam, but it was only a small step. A single, decisive victory, then a substantial increase in our ground forces must be expected.

We need additional forces in Viet Nam; first, because only a small part of this war is being fought. Men are more than a thousand miles away in the war, front-line combat personnel. Secondly, in order to bring the war to a close. While the fighting is not at a full scale, losing, there must be a ten to one advantage of conventional forces against Viet Cong forces. Clearly, the forces we have in Viet Nam are not sufficient to bring about a halt. 200,000 regular and irregular combat troops the Viet Cong have at their command.

Whole-Hearted Commitment Needed
Where are additional forces to come from? The United States draft will provide some of the necessary personnel. However, the draft is not another, more readily available source of manpower. That is why we all feel, in our allies, who are threatened by Communist aggression in Southeast Asia, that they should have a more whole-hearted commitment to the war in Viet Nam than even the United States is showing. If we request they should be willing to provide a substantial increase in the ground forces in Viet Nam. Already a start has been made in this direction. Australia has agreed to send its marines in Viet Nam. Over the past weekend, South Korea has agreed to send its marines. So far, however, these forces have been too small to have any appreciable effect on the war in Viet Nam. What is needed is a whole-hearted commitment from the other Southeast Asian allies, if we are to achieve a lasting victory in Viet Nam.

Smuggling Continues
On the high seas, the United States' Seventh Fleet rules superimposed. However, an estimated 300 submarines off the coast of North and South Viet Nam, the flow of smuggled arms and supplies continues. Fast, high-speed, shallow draft boats, such as the P.T. boats used by the Viet Cong and by the U.S. during World War II are used. Recently, these boats are not in production. By making it easier for our forces in Viet Nam, we would be able to cut drastically Viet Cong's supply of weapons. This would mean decreasing the shortage of money to bring total victory to Viet Nam.

It is clear that there are many steps that remain to be taken before Viet Nam is achieved. And, on the seas, before the United States can say that it has achieved total commitment toward winning the war in Viet Nam. Until that commitment has been made we must strive to convince our enemies trying to win in Viet Nam?
Welcome Fresh!

by Carol Gais

In order to lessen the difficulty caused by the transition from the directed work of high school to the independent and more intensive work of the College, several days are set aside to assist freshmen in planning their academic program and adjusting to their new environment.

Dr. Eugene Farley formally opened orientation with a welcoming address to the freshmen on September 12. Conferences were held for the parents of male students with George Masson, dean of men, and for parents of female students with Margaret Abbott, dean of women. Afterwards, there was a reception for parents and faculty on Chase Lawn.

The following day male students had a conference with Dean Ralston, female students, with Dean Abell who spoke on "The Philosophy of Women." The following morning freshmen donned their dinks and, with subtle persuasion by upperclassmen, wheeled the books of the freshman division to Kirk Park. For the remainder of the week the weary freshmen were left to themselves to speculate on the adventures they would have during their first weeks of college and the inevitable hazing.

One such inevitable adventure was Ski Night, sponsored by IDC. The freshmen in each of the 22 domestic houses composed a ski dealing with life on a college campus, and performed the skits in the gymnasium Thursday night. The following afternoon, the freshmen visited Africaborn and Ralston, Mrs. Millie Gittes, Miss Charlotte Lord, John Crossen, and Stephen Van Dyke, chose the most entertaining skit composed by men's and women's dormitories.

A "Come and Meet Us" dance was sponsored by the senior class Friday night, to give the freshmen an opportunity to meet the upperclassmen in less formal surroundings. The following morning freshmen donned their dinks and, with subtle persuasion by upperclassmen, wheeled the books of the freshman division to Kirk Park.

Frosh All Hazed Out

by Helen Dugan, Darla Petrov and Ronald Anton

September brings the rise of the freshaves, and the scurry of students to and from buildings. Just as the leaves and wind differ not in composition, but only in individuality, so do the species of students remain constant.

This year again brings different seniors to spread their dominance among three subclimate classes. The juniors add their substantial lot of authority to that of the seniors to override the two remaining subvarieties classes. Not about to be left out, the sophomores join their superiors, as much as they are allowed to, in forcing into submission the last remaining, little-thought-of, rarely consulted, scum of the earth — the frosh.

Enter Don Trodden, a bewildered, human frosh. Don's present position, besides that of lowly frosh, is Gies Hall. The time 8:35 a.m. By 9 a.m. Don must be in Parrish Hall, fifth floor. The problem: 1959 scheduling upceramics strategically located between Gies and Parrish.

The possible solutions: A) By tubing to Parrish, one eliminates upperclassmen, but have you ever tried to make 30 floors without dragging a pull-toy with the other? Besides, time is of the essence. B) A second solution would be for Don to remove his dinks and sign, draw circles under his eyes, breathe with hard, vicious pants, and crash through the door and into the street, impersonating an upperclassman looking for a frosh. But there's one give-away to this seemingly clever scheme: student's wear pants with one leg rolled up, one green sock, one blue, and one, a note written on his left (auspicious) sneaker, that says, "Smoke Pot? Now! I ask you, how many? And the only possible way to eliminate this subsystem would lead to a very prompt arrest for indirect exposition. C) From the start Don Trodden, and only, meaning alternative, is to gras and bear it. Remember: smile in the face of the enemy. He is likely to feel somehow of a nut. But at least you won't go to jail.

Picking the seemingly least disastrous of the three solutions, Don Trodden, with his eyes running, set out to start his perilous journey. He made it as far as Connolly when the drizzle fell.

Hey, frosh, Hey, you. Come on.

Don stopped in mid-step and turned slowly. Three towering upperclassmen beckoned him close. Within the next ten minutes, he was the victim of a hydrant, promptly jilted it by making love to a tree, and directed traffic on River Street while dancing the Fugue.

The rest of his day was conducted in like manner. Despite "buttons" and proposals, he left made it to all his classes and his day was finally coming to an end. As he left his last class building, he spied his big brother, and approached him with the relief of seeing in each of him a companionate, "Hey, frosh! I want you to do something for me."

"Whenever you see a man throw down a cigarette butt, you will politely ask him if you may have it. If he says, "Yes," you are to thank him and tell him you're a cancer sufferer. Is that clear, FROSH?"

It was not clear. Nothing was clear. The best Don Trodden could say after he was shouted, "I love you too, Don." His hair were bigger, briefer than before. When Don awoke, he found himself surrounded by flowers. His first jolting thoughts were the waves, and the scurry of students to and from buildings. Just as the leaves and wind differ not in composition, but only in individuality, so do the species of students remain constant.

As Don Trodden ranched anxiously toward his dorm, he thought of the rising wind, the falling leaves, and at 8 a.m. that time when he called. Hey, don't.
Cavallini Proposes Calendar Revisions

by Leona Sokas

Concerning his position as Student Government president, John Cavallini recently stated: "I consider myself the administrative head of Student Government, not the head of a group who rules the roost. I feel my position calls for leading, not pushing. I resent and will express my disapproval to Student Government, but I also expect Student Government to come up with ideas."

As part of his leading policy, Cavallini has proposed an amendment to the Student Government Constitution, which he hopes Student Government will pass. The amendment would make class representation to be increased by one additional member per class; therefore each class would be represented by five students instead of the present four. Cavallini explained his reasoning for proposing the amendment: "Though Student Government membership has remained the same throughout the years, classes have increased, and with them, Student Government responsibilities. Therefore, we need additional representatives in Student Government."

Another of Cavallini's plans for this year is to have a committee try to arrange lectures (which will be held in the Student Center) for the benefit of some of the authors of various books and magazines.

Concerning the controversy over hazing (it's been called off, no it hasn't, etc.), Cavallini stated that hazing is wrong and should be stopped, and that only Student Government has the power to call it off.

Woodenz Appointed
Football Line Mentor

Looking concernedly from his perch atop the stands at the Wilkes Athletic Field is Chuck Adonizio, a new addition to the Wilkes staff. The new mentor, a former Wilkes tackle, will handle the line coaching duties. Adonizio, holder of the tackle position for four years at St. John's High School in Pittston and for two years at the University of Pittsburgh, before transferring to Wilkes. He was graduated from Wilkes in 1965 with a B.S. in business education. While a student at Wilkes, Adonizio played under coaches Schmidt, Jonah Rubbicic, and Frank Spudis. Adonizio will replace coach Spudis, who was forced to give up his coaching duties to devote his time to pressing business matters.

It is felt that the addition of Adonizio, currently associated with the Addy Asphalt Company, to the coaching staff will prove beneficial, and the Beacon would like to take the opportunity to welcome him back to Wilkes in his new capacity.

Grid Rules Change

The most important rule change in college football for the 1965 season is the adjustment in the regulations governing substitutions which permit:

1. (Two eligible substitutes of either team to enter the game at any time before the ball is put in play.
2. Any number of substitutions of either team to enter the game between periods, after a score or try, when Team B is awarded a first down when following a kick. Team A is awarded a first down.

This revision will allow the use of specialists at any time with the same freedom of utilization as in 1964. Unlimited substitutions when team possession changes is the major revision. Resorting to the commission of a foul to stop the clock in order to make more than two substitutions as in 1964 is not now possible.

The Wilkes soccer team got off on the right foot last Saturday with a 3-2 victory against Harpur. Although Harpur drew first blood, scoring early in the first quarter, Wilkes was able to bounce back in the second period with a goal by Joe Kiefer. Kiefer also scored in the second half, boosting the Colonels to a 2-1 lead. In the late moments of the final quarter, Harpur tied the score on a penalty kick, forcing the game into overtime. Neither team was able to score in the first overtime period, but Rick Beck, who was selected to the Atlantic Conference soccer team last season, connected with a fine shot in the second period giving Wilkes the victory.

Colonels Halt Lebanon Valley In Opening Game

Frank Rodello

Behind the passing of quarterback Rich Roshong and the power running of backs Roger Beatty and Ray Lowery, the Colonels successfully opened their 1965 season with a 21-15 victory over the Flying Dutchmen of Lebanon Valley.

Taking advantage of Jay Holloway’s interception, the Colonels emerged from the evenly fought first half with a 7-0 lead, scoring on a Roshong pass to Mike Connolly.

While the Colonels and the Dutchmen played statistically even ball in the first half, Wilkes, with fourteen first downs, dominated play in the second half. Setting the pace for this stanza, the Colonels took the opening kickoff and scored again on a Roshong pass, this time a 37-yarder, to Joe Skvarla. Then in the fourth quarter, showing fine ball control, the Colonels marched 52 yards using four fullbacks and ten plays. In this drive, fullback Ray Lowery carried eight times and in one stretch produced three firstdowns in five carries. Wilkes finally scored on a 3 yard plunge by Roger Beatty, sophomore halfback.

The Colonels defense, not to be outdone, stifled the Dutchmen’s ground game, while intercepting two of their passes. A fourth period safety by the defense added 2 insurance points.

The Dutchmen, unable to put together a good T.Y.D. drive until their last series of downs, first scored in the third quarter on a drive sustained by a fumbled punt, an inordinate penalty, and a reception of a deflected pass.

You Can Depend On POMEROY’S

ECAC Names Lowery

For his alert play and display of powerful running, Ray Lowery, has been chosen as the Week’s first Athlete of the Week.

Lowery is a 6’ 212 lb. fullback from Wilkes-Barre. A political science major, Lowery is a welcome transfer from Cornell, where he won freshman minerals in football.

Lowery showed great promise for the coming season with his bull-like rushes, which set up two touchdowns against a formidable Lebanon Valley squad. Against the Dutchmen he carried 25 times for a total of 99 yards. For his heroes he was chosen halfback on the E.C.A. first team.

On one sustained drive he carried the ball seven times to success. Several times he plowed through the Dutchman line with as many as four defenders on his back. Lowery kept the fans on their toes with some quick and accurate punts. Credit also must be given to the excellent blocking on the part of the Colonels.

While a student at Cohong High School, Lowery lettered in football, basketball, and track. In his senior year he was chosen on the Unico squad.

Again the Beacon salutes Ray Lowery on being selected “Athlete of the Week.”

Intramurals

All students interested in participating in intramural touch football are reminded to turn in team rosters and captains to Mr. Reese or Mr. Rainey by Friday, October 14. Competitions will begin Monday, October 18. As in the past, the teams will be divided into the Dorm and Independent Leagues.

Any students interested in acting as officials for the games are asked to contact Mr. Reese.

Winning Season Forecast

Bob Thompson

With the 1965 football and soccer seasons upon us, the Beacon interviews the coaches. Assistant Coachland Schmidt and James Ferris, who gave the following predictions for their teams.

Although Schmidt would not actually commit himself, from the information given and from the results of last Saturday’s game, a logical conclusion is that this will be a very good year for the gridders. Coach Schmidt was allured by the largest turnout of candidates in the College’s history, among whom were thirteen lettermen and a large number of freshmen.

The team will be led by Captains Ralph Heidershot, a junior, sophomore tackle Jack Gallagher, quarterback Rich Roshong, back Paul Farra and Roger Beatty, and Ray Lowery at fullback. They are all experienced uppersackers. In addition, there are many promising freshmen, two-thirds of the entire team, who have yet to prove themselves. Some few who were outstanding against Lebanon Valley were Rich Roshong, Paul Farra and halfback Mike Connolly, both of whom scored on passes. Linebacker Cannon, Lovero, Layden, Sweery and Merrill also participated in Saturday’s game. The Colonels defensive backfield, composed mainly of freshmen, was also particularly good. Key performers were freshmen Davics, Kane, Wiendl and Holloway and unverclassmen.

Another bright spot in the outlook is the specialty department. The fine punt return of freshmen Malloy and Forde, the punts of Ray Lowery, and the place kicking of Paul Farra round out the team.

The fate of the team lies with the freshmen. If they can develop a strong and halfback, they can help make up in skill and desire what they lack in experience. In this regard, they can help the team immeasurably. The schedule is rough and the team is relatively weak, but they show a desire to win. Coach Schmidt stated that if the freshmen can develop and the upperclassmen continue to show their leadership and ability, and if they avoid injuries, then Wilkes can develop into one of the finest teams in the conference.

With eleven retention lettermen and a host of capable freshmen, the soccer outlook is also good. Coach Ferris’ booters will have a new, level field to replace the old, hilly one. Among the returning lettermen will be 1964 All-Conference selections Mike Beck, Joe Karle and Rich Beck, outside left. Other key returnees are Captain Rich Bucko, Dave Thomas, and Joe Karle, who scored twice in Wilkes’ win last Saturday. The lettermen can not rest on their laurels, however, for there is keen competition for many positions.
