Students Select Darlene Moll

by Cecile R. Rosen

This year's Winter Carnival was held on Friday, January 28, at Buck Hill Falls. Those who finished reg-tering on Thursday bravely headed for the slopes, the pond, or picturesque walks in the below-zero weather. After the races of Friday registration, undergraduates followed. Inside the Inn, games of ping-pong, pool, billiards, and bridge were enjoyed by those who escaped to the warmth of the fire.

The activities of the day continued into evening with dinner and dancing to the music of Mel Wyman and the Rhythm Aces. The highlight of the evening was the crowning of Darlene Moll as Snow Queen by last year's queen, Diane Allan. Members of the queen's court were Maureen Savage and Cheryl Tarry.

Darlene is a member of the Student Government and is president of Callin Hall. Maureen is a cheerleader, a member of Women's Athletic Association, and a member of the Education Club. Cheryl is a member of T.D.R. and the Executive Council.

Ron Czajkowski, co-chairman of the event, emphasized that the Winter Carnival is an annual non-profit event held for the students during winter break, as a strictly "fun" day. However, in our enthusiasm, not everyone had a "fun" day. Carnivals of the day included a broken foot, a few broken ankles, and a frozen ear lobe.

Rehearsals Begin For C'n'C Plays

by Stephen J. Gavala

Cue and Curtain will present two one-act plays at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday evenings, February 26. The bill will be a Gracie Allen comedy, "The Apollo of Bellac." This rather long one-act play contains the essence of Gracie's imagination and style. It is set in the Office of Inventions — inventions such as a book that reads itself and the universal vegetable.

A shy girl named Agnes (Heidi Halsizer) comes to the office looking for a job. She is ignored until a non-descript little man from the town of Bellac comes to her aid. He demonstrates that she can have her way with anyone if she will, upon meeting him, declare that he is handsome, and company with her to the nonexistent Apollo of Bellac. This she does by tempting him with the clerk (Jack Jablonski) and working her way up through Mr. Gracie, director of the company (Stephen J. Gavala), to her most successful victim, the chairman of the board (David Frey). She not only manages to make each man she comes in contact with feel important and useful, she also succeeds with the president of the patent company (Gene Susko) by changing his estimate of his own self-esteem and those of his people (Nancy Leland). By changing his attitude toward his secretary Chev-re's (Toni Homnak) Agnes brings about a further transformation of his character.

Second Play

Completing the evening of theatre will be "The Lottery," adapted by Brianed Dufeld from a short story by Shirley Jackson. Miss Jackson's strength as a writer of satire is present in this play, as is her ability to portray simultaneously the normal surface of life and the primitive cruelty and fears which lie just below it.

Characters in this play include Paul Gavala as Horace Martin, Harley Miller as Belva Summers, Dan Weitz as his brother Joe, Sheryl Nepola-ton as Sookie, and Black Lobo as a private detective. "The Lottery," written by Shirley Jackson, is one of the most famous stories ever written and has been adapted to a play by Charles A. Learned and James E. Meehan.

Editorial

Turn, Turn, Turn

Contempt is proper when it is directed toward an ignoble person, an ignoble institution; but it is utterly unreasonable to be contemptuous of an ash tray or a coke glass.

What is their particular contribution to ignominy that they should be so mistreated by certain of the College's students? What harm does a cafeteria ash tray bring about that it should be filled with garbage instead of ashes and butts? What is the offense of a coke glass that it should be tortured by burning cigarette butts? Perhaps the ice cuts short the glass's agony by its ability to quench the fire, but the point is that ashes do not belong, in the first place, in a coke glass — coke does.

For there is a purpose for everything; and a thing for every purpose. Turn. Turn. Turn. Ashes in ash trays. Garbage in garbage disposals. And coke in coke glasses.

The cafeteria staff obligingly provides students with ash trays and refuse containers. Please do not pervert the natural purposes of these particular aids to better living.

There is really no point in decorumizing them — except perhaps to demonstrate a thrift for slovenliness on the part of certain students. And they should really not be so anxious to give physical expression to this drive to be enveloped by garbage. Their primary concern should be to maintain the cleanliness of their surroundings and to defend from perversion the natural functions of materials provided for their use.

The Tables Turned

In Sloppy Conversation

by Helen Dugan

Once upon a time there was a college — Wilkes College — to be exact. This was a very happy college — clip once for the public relations department — in this happy college was a cafeteria — a secret partner of the alka-seltzer company or so.

In this nauseating . . . er . . . nostalgically happy college cafeteria twelve wooden lives are so ruthlessly crushed each day that one must shake his head in utter contempt over how much longer the students indifference will allow this vulgarity to continue.

At approximately 7:30 a.m., the abuse begins. A half-dozen student stagger into the cafeteria day-sy and recklessly tosses his books on the table. The table moans ever so slightly from the infection. As the boy walks over to the counter to get coffee, the table utilizes its possibly last few minutes of solitude.

Posts. Hey. Table. Yeh, you with the shiny top — temporally shiny, I might add. So you're new here, eh? Well, today is going to be a day you'll never forget. The tables starting to come now, so you'll better prepare yourself for getting your own loaded till you think you're going to collapse. Hey, what's your name?

Stately Stan

Well, when I was a tree — oh, those were the good old days — all my friends use to admire my gigantic limbs that waved so gracefully when they were caught up by a passing wind. Someone called me Stately Stan and on. But now with these rivets and this varnish, I don't feel so stately. By the way, what's your name?

That's the story of my life. All my neighbors just used to call me tree. They would say, 'Hey tree, what's a scrawny little thing like you doing here with us great walnuts?' But I did get to be a table — those guy probably ends up in coffins — but now every one just says, 'Hey, table.' It's really very flattering.

Oh, I'm sorry. Didn't you ever have a name?

I thought its Tim, although no one ever called me that while I was growing. That is, I was an air-o-plane.

I'll be thankful that it happens. Certainly is. But the morning in the house doesn't come to lunch time. On top of the sugar and coke goes lettuce, mustard, cake, tuna fish, coke, dinner plates, dirty napkins, chips, cigarettes, and more cups and sauce. And when you are sure your surface is completely covered, the second shift of luncheon dishes comes.

Poor Timmy. Ahhhhh!! (Uttered in obvious pain.)

Coffee?

No. I think its tea with lemon. It's starting to curdle my varnish.

Wait till you get the knife shaved in your grave.

Good heavens, will you be so lucky? I mean, do the students clear away the dishes?

It hasn't happened yet. They just keep piling them up until they cannot pile them any higher.

Then do they take them away?

Frustration

Na. Then they start piling them on the chairs. That goes on till the end of the day. For nine hours you stand there wishing you could kick some kid back or better yet dump the whole mess in his lap — just to see how he likes it.

Then there are the States when all the students leave for the day?

That's the time of day I have to keep thinking of going on with this torture. About 5 p.m. a nice old lady comes with a big basket with all the dishes and food away and scrubs my top with warm sudsy water. I don't have it that good even when I was a tree. Yeh, that's the good time, alright. But it's the next thing that I really look forward to.

Yeah. That's when he moves back all the chairs and brings mamas over to me. You mean she brings your mama in here?

Yes, she's a逼近.
In the summer of 1964 the College board of trustees voted to institute a policy providing for sabbatical leaves. Dr. Stanko M. Vujica, chairman of the philosophy and religion department, was selected as the first member to take advantage of the new policy.

Dr. Vujica and his wife have been at the College since 1947. Dr. Vujica is a member of the American Philosophical Association, the American Association of University Professors, and the Croatian Academy of America. He has published extensively both in English and in the Croatian. He has also been chairman of the faculty senate for the past few years. Mrs. Vujica is listed as a writer in ‘Who’s Who Among American Women,’ and as a member of ‘Who’s Who in Education,’ and ‘Who’s Who in Library Service.’

Dr. Vujica, on a previous sabbatical, spent a year in Asia studying oriental philosophers and religions. This semester he plans to return to a warmer section of the United States to help the administration with the Smoot-Hawley Act Policy. Mrs. Vujica, who has also been published in her native Croatian, plans to continue her research in the field of history. She will resume her duties on June 15.

Vujicas JCG Plan For Larger Library

At a recent assembly meeting, Dr. Eugene S. Farley spoke on the topic ‘Shorter Library: A Dream That Died,’ which dealt mainly with the new library. As a result, he presented the College’s solution to the problem.

Pointing out the College’s greatly expanded projects, Dr. Farley noted that the current facilities that attest to the College’s growth are: ten years in the making, the new student center, science, art, and humanities programs have been strengthened. For the past three years, the Chemistry and Physics have been introduced.

The new library will shrink $30,000 volumes and will select 650 students. Dr. Farley said that the increased space by stating that within the last three years the use of the library has tripled. Increased enrollment and assignments have created the present-day situation where make-shift tactics have reached the limit. For example, because the present library has a normal capacity for only 5,000 volumes, it has been necessary to shelf books in the science center and reduce the seating capacity. This arrangement has allowed the College to accommodate the present collection of 80,000 volumes, but since 6,000 to 7,000 volumes are added each year, it is apparent that an impasse will exist until adequate space is provided.

The inevitable answer is a new library, the cost of which is estimated at approximately $1,100,000. Of this amount the College is seeking $1,500,000 from friends while the remaining $500,000 has been assured through a federal grant from the National Defense Education Administration.

Concluding his talk with a look to the future, Dr. Farley stated, ‘When the library is completed, it is hoped that the College will be able to strengthen and consolidate its position for several years before planning other projects involved in the long-range plans which have been projected to the year 2000.’

ICG Convention Date, Plans Set

The College chapter of I.C.G. will play host to members of the Northeast Region at the Annual Regional Convention on February 20. Among the member schools of this region attending are Lafayette, Susquehanna, Lebanon Valley, King’s, Lehigh, and Muhlenberg. This regional meeting is held to prepare the convention delegates for the state convention to be held March 4 and April 1 in Harrisburg. Among the main objectives of the convention will be the nomination of a candidate from this region to the office of speaker of the Harrisburg Convention, and the choice of bills to be presented at the Harrisburg meeting. Andrea Gallet, regional director, will preside over the regional convention.

I.C.G., the Inter-Collegiate Conference on Government, is an organization unique to the state of Pennsylvania. In 1933 the Mass Conference was founded by Dr. Max Blatt initiated the organization in order to make the workings of government both state and national levels familiar to college students. Last year’s Harrisburg convention followed the pattern of a model Congress, while this year’s congress will be modeled
