“Freddy The Chef” Boosted To New Cafeteria Post

by Maureen Klaproth

“Freddy the Chef!” has become an expression known to the students of Sterling College.

One of the most popular and traditional figures on the Campus, Fred Wall recently was promoted from chef to assistant manager in the Dining Hall. He is familiar to all dormitory students as “Freddy the Chef.”

Most students are amazed to learn that Freddy has been here since 1950, putting in almost two decades of service to Wilkes. When he first came to Wilkes, with the help of Mr. John Chwalek, he was put in charge of the first cafeteria for dorm students, located in what is now Sterling Hall, a girls’ dorm on S. River Street.

Freddy likes to recall those days, especially “all the parties we used to have at Christmas, Easter, and all kinds of occasions.” He has proudly watched the number of dormitory students multiply from 75 in the days at Sterling to almost 400 today.

Wall gained cooking experience in the Navy at Spokane, Washington, and served during the years he has worked for the Press Cafeteria in Washington, D.C., Mt. Airy Lodge for 2 years, and a stint playing S. Claus in Maine, for five years.

Life has been good for Freddy here at Wilkes. Trying to satisfy students from different backgrounds demands that one remain flexible, a quality that remains a problem for students. In fact, he refuses to admit any faults.

His cafeteria co-workers are eager to sing his praises, One of his honored, Mrs. Cecile Breishmam, explained, “Freddy is the most patient person I have ever worked for, He is always pleasant and a great manager.” William Denon, manager of the cafeteria, chimed in to say, “There’s never been a man who carries responsibility better, His patience is limitless.”

Fred Wall

Freddy’s memories at Wilkes could fill a book. He is fond of calling the pleasure he gained from preparing a luncheon for Mrs. Lyn- don Johnson, when she visited Wilkes a few years ago. But big things are nothing new to Freddy.

While at the National Press Club, he had the responsibility of serving many important figures on the Washington scene, including the late President Franklin D. Roose- well.

Outside the Wilkes cafeteria, Freddy can be found at his new Mountaingness home, which he built five years ago. He shares this house with his wife, Laura, his aunt, and his dog, Pat.

One of Freddy’s favorite subjects is his dog, whose exploits he loves to relate. To hear Freddy tell it, Pat is the “smartest dog” ever, performing such functions as blowing the horn if Freddy stays inside a car for more than 15 minutes.

A dean at Mt. Zion Baptist Church, Freddy is also a Mason. He is very proud of playing S. Claus to underprivileged children each Christmas, and as every dorm student fondly recalls, Freddy also performs this service in the Wilkes dining hall the evening of the Christmas dinner. Who can forget seeing candlelight as Freddy app- ears to the accompaniment of sleigh bells and a hearty “Ho, ho, ho!”

Annual Event Is Scheduled With Hampton

On the weekend of April 17-19, the annual exchange program between Hampton Institute and Wilkes will begin as Wilkes’ students journey to Hampton, Virginia.

This affair was initiated seven years ago by co-founders Dean George Ralphson of Wilkes and Dean Thomas Hawkins of Hampton. Hampton Institute is an all-Negro liberal arts college in Virginia.

Juniors and seniors with satisfactory academic records are eligible for the program. Selection of the group will be made by a joint committee of IDC and the Council of Deans.

To apply, it is necessary to obtain an application from Millie Cit- tens at the Bookstore, and to de- posit the completed form in the IDC mailbox at the Bookstore.

If any additional information is desired, see any member of IDC or the College Office.

The first program would consist of a concert, and is scheduled for the evening of April 17. A dance, and a concert, and is scheduled for the evening of April 18. A dance and a concert, and is scheduled for the evening of April 19.

Dr. Leach Named New History Chairman

The appointment of Dr. David M. Leach as the chairman of the Wilkes College History Department was announced during the closing of the Spring semester, by Dr. Francis Michelin, dean of aca- demic affairs.

Leach, who is currently the dean of Alfred University, Alfred, N.Y., and it is anticipated that he will assume his new position here some time during the early Summer.

Dr. Michelin stated the College considered itself extremely fortunate in obtaining the academic services of Dr. Leach, who has had ex- tensive experience in both the aca- demic and administrative fields of college activities.

The addition of Dr. Leach, it is felt, will further enhance the growth and development of the History Department here.

The department has always enjoyed an outstanding reputation and of late has been under the very able leadership of Dr. Harold Cox, who has also achieved considerable success as a student in the field of history.

State Will Provide Scholarship Aid

Students who did not receive a Pennsylvania State Scholarship Grant during the academic year and who plan to enroll for classes next September may obtain applications for the scholarship. Students must have obtained a B average during the past three years of secondary school. They must also have manifested an interest in a college education.

Applications are available at the Financial Aid Office, Chase Hall, be- fore March 15.

Students who selected a 1969-70 Scholarship Grant should have re- ceived a renewal application by the end of February. As in the past, all State Scholarship applicants must furnish a notarized copy of the cur- rent (1969) Federal Income Tax Re- turn.

If any additional information is re- ceived, see any member of IDC or the College Office.

The last proposal, while still allowing clubs dance dates, would reduce the number of dance dates to one per week for the Kingston Armory every sixth week. School is closed to allow college students until two weeks prior to the performance. Seats would then be open to the public at a set fee. The performance, how- ever, to be held for, would allow the money from outside attendance to be clear profit. This excludes the ex- change for their ticket, which must be sold.

TDR Sorority Borrows $50 To Run 2 Teas

The first hour of the recent Student Government meeting was tak- en up in discussion of a new budget from a treasurer’s committee re- port, and the future business, primarily the upcoming elections. The re- mainder of the two and one-half hour meeting was spent in a discussion of freshmen hazing.

After a call to order by Vice President Tom Kelly, chairman of the meeting, the first item was a request by Marilyn Moffet, TDR president, for a $50 loan to help subsidize the cost of two teas for fund raising. The motion was seconded by Paul McGovern, and was tabled.

Unity Required

The recent appointment of Dr. David M. Leach as chairman of the history department has caused much consternation throughout many social circles throughout the campus.

It should be noted that we share similar opinions to those expressed. The students' concern which has become evident in the past few days is justified when it is clearly understood that the entire college community may be affected by the move.

Dr. Leach's appointment was carefully considered and thoroughly scrutinized before such announcement was made public. The newly-appointed chairman is a fully-qualified individual and should do much to increase the already-acknowledged outstanding reputation of the department itself.

However, we also feel that this move should be viewed from an impersonal and prejudiced way. We seriously doubt if personalities ever entered into the final decision.

It is hoped that Dr. Harold Cox assumes this view and accepts it... with regret, if necessary. We realize the personal confrontations which Dr. Cox must face now, but we also are fully aware of his value and importance to the College. To say the students of Wilkes College need the renowned professor would be a drastic understatement. The students of Wilkes College want Dr. Cox!

Playground On Campus

Dr. Eugene S. Farley, president of the College, might consider the acquisition of swings, sliding boards, and sand boxes for immediate installation for the "youngsters" who "play" in the Eugene S. Farley Library.

The preceding paragraph may seem a bit trite, but we must attempt to view this sad situation as an outsider would. College students, in today's society, are not the most admired social group by any means... when one is subjected to the daily fiascos in a college environment...

Such a situation cannot be overlooked and must be remedied immediately — by the actual offenders. The librarians do not wear police uniforms and are not expected to patrol the building with clubs. We, the responsible students, must see the need for such a move and then set out to correct it. It is we who must determine the worth of the College.

Two Villices may be found in a page from Anne Almetti and Dan Kopen, attempt to answer that question in the columns below. An attempt was made to represent all possible sides of the topic, but our requests were not granted. Joyce Pitney and Steven Robertson were also given the opportunity to voice their opinions on the subject.

The columns make no pretense at being intelligent, since those of them who attempt to be are awfully absurd. They acknowledge it, appreciate them, and are firmly convinced that they are good will. It is the bad that must be eliminated.

To expect complete satisfaction from two thousand individuals is to blasepheme the expression "in- dividual." For a completely satisfactory situation would suggest the existence of a dangerously high degree of interest within the student body. To fully meet the tremendously broad range of requirements that this student body presents would require efforts that were nothing more than super-human [not that such efforts should be deemed unreasonable, especially at $45 per credit hour]. Common sense then, would indicate that a student body of this size there may be internalized or externalized.

However, what we are concerned with is not the number of individuals who will have upon an individual a situation in which he may be attracted to others with a particular type of value we are dealing with. We are concerned with that which will individualize the hierarchy of values to which one refers alternatives for resolution. We are concerned with that which will give to individual preference frame that an individual employee to make decisions and ultimately to have a preference. For example, as students we generally have a great deal of frustration with the acceptance of a value that is not our own. This activity over stability, attach a high degree of moral awareness to our activities, and are highly colored by the desire to identify with movements and philosophers. On the other hand, the good person and administrator (if you will excuse this rather arbitrary lumping) is able to remain relatively even comparable with our values.

This is not to attribute to these groups a lack of moral fiber, satisfaction, or inability to illustrate that values will probably diverge to a great extent from the values that are apparent among the students within that group.

It becomes obvious that those whom we have postulated to be what we may call the "heroic" goal, i.e., the benefit of the student, will not all subscribe to the same values. We are not at all certain that a student will not be a victim of those who are blinded by an inarticulate or even incomparable with our values.

Thus, what may appear as a conflict of values may be a simple conflict of values. Each values or groups is less a disparity of goals and more a disparity of values values. Each being employed by those involved in an effort to authenticate a common goal. In this framework of analytical reasoning, we are not at all certain that we can absolutely imagine our grievances as being aimed at a person or persons by those involved in an effort to authenticate a common goal. In this framework of analytical reasoning, we are not at all certain that we can absolutely imagine our grievances as being aimed at a person. By those involved in an effort to authenticate a common goal. Some word must be said about the case of students from whom we receive our reports. This may be true of any technical school member from the CPA, for their technical skill was evident in the production of the paper.

Following a large musical, a theater usually has a great deal of difficulty in breaking down the act and providing an entertaining evening that will not be an overkill. The results of both plays was wise and one that was both satisfying and enjoyable.

What Is Wrong With Wilkes College?

by Anne Almetti

Inspiration, or what the poets call "divine fire," can be a powerful and motivating factor in solving the problems of Wilkes College.

Students are not apathetic answering questions in front of a large lecture hall, nor do they sit quietly wondering why they are there. They know that if they don't take advantage of the opportunity, others will.

At Wilkes there is an abundance of "Don Quixotes" who lack the courage and the wisdom to face reality. But, there is also an abundance of those who are ready to accept the challenge.

If more students concerned themselves in the student association, we might be able to find the sources of some of the student problems. There are students who are convinced that the student association is the only effective way to solve these problems. It is, however, wise to remember that the student association is only one of many potential solutions. It is important to recognize that the student association is not the only effective way to solve these problems.

The student association may be an effective way to solve some of the student problems, but it is not the only effective way. Other solutions, such as the administration, the faculty, and the students themselves, must be considered.

In conclusion, it is important to recognize that the student association is not the only effective way to solve the problems of Wilkes College. Other solutions, such as the administration, the faculty, and the students themselves, must be considered.
Colleges End Season; Swamp Del Val, 42-0

by Galeen Cross

The most significant event to occur all evening at the Wilkes College gym on Saturday night was the presentation of a plaque to Joe Wiendl as a token of thanks for his contributions to the Colonels success story over the last four years. As a sidelight, the presentation, the grappling teams managed to bring their season mark to 14-4 by defeating the Aggies of Delaware Valley, 42-0. The match was so one-sided that it was apparent after the first match, pinning Andy Matviak against Al Lewis and resulting in a 24-3 Matviak victory that the Colonels were a far superior bunch.

Matviak did everything but nail Lewis to their floor in their 123-pound bout, as the Colonels' fourth in a row. Lewis scored points on all three holds and had to turn to two minutes of riding time in order to gain his 4-2 victory.

The evening's first pin occurred in the 137-pound division as Steve Klassenbang plowed his Delaware Valley foe, Jim Schlueter, in 36 seconds becoming the first event winner for what turned out to be the fastest pin of the evening. In a duel marked by the quickness and strength of both, Al Zehner with 160 pounds and Dennis Dettman with 160 pounds went at 160 points. Zehner hit the win column for the first time since suffering three straight defeats. Zehner, with 160 pounds, claimed the win in 3:57. Zehner took the first point in the second period. Zehner was declared the winner and Zehner went on to the first pin.

In a bout which nearly turned into a disaster, Joe Wiendl finally emerged as the victor over his opponent, Bill Heiser, in 2:40 of the second period. Wiendl was called upon to use every ounce of strength and experience to fight out of a deep cut in the second period of his bout.

Joe Wiendl is shown as he receives plaque from Coach John Reese and the Wilkes wrestlers for the tremendous contribution he has made to the Colonels wrestling team during the last four years.

The 137-pound bout brought streaking Rich Cecchill up against Everett Channel. After having caught a takedown, reverse cradle, and riding time, the result was a 6-2 victory for Cecchill. The victory raised his season mark to 9-3.

Ron Fritts and Tom Grant closed the scoring for the evening with two fast pins in the 91-pound, and heavyweight classes. Fritts clamped his foe in 3:15, while Grant managed to pin his man to the mat in 1:35.

Not all the victories were clear-cut as the Colonels split with the Aggies, 42-0. The Colonels' 24-3 Matviak victory, the fastest pin of the evening, was not enough to prevent the Aggies from winning the dual match, 28-22. However, the Colonels' victory in the 137-pound division, 14-4, and the 185-pound division, 15-3, were enough to give the Colonels the win in the dual match.

Intramural League Playoffs Near, Warner Hall Registers Big Upset

by Bob Ockenfuss

Ten regularly-scheduled games dotted the first portion of the 1969 season, which included a 9-3 record. As the season progressed, theColonels wrestling team continued to improve, and their first dual match, against the Aggies, resulted in a 24-3 victory for the Colonels. The Colonels' first win was a 14-4 victory over the Aggies.

The Colonels grapplers began their quest for their eighth Middle Atlantic Conference championship at Muhlenberg College's Memorial Hall. The Colonels have had 20 individual champions in the competition. Twenty-six schools will be competing to determine the winner of this year's championship. Reigning champion Temple University is returning with three winners from last year's tournament. Wayne Boyd in the 123-pound class is a two-time MAC champion and is expected to battle it out with Andy Matviak for this year's title.

Dave Frazzenko at 130 pounds and Steve Alexander in the 152-pound division are the Owls' other two returning titans. Wilkes' only titlist from last year's competition, Dick Cook, was lost through graduation. Joe Wiendl was defeated by Lafayette's Jack McPherson in what was the biggest upset of last year's meet. Ironically, McPherson was knocked out in the first round, but went on to win the NCAA Small College Division championship. As a result, Wiendl is favored to retain his NCAA title, as well as regain the MAC crown which he had first captured during the 1967 season.

When asked what he thought about the grapplers' chances this weekend, Coach Reese replied, "We're in fairly good shape going into the tournament and with a little luck in the draws, we stand a good chance of regaining the title." Coach Reese also stated that other schools which have a chance of finishing near the top are Hofstra, Black Knights, Warner Hall wrestling, and the Colonels. The Colonels are scheduled to defeat the Colonels grapplers this season; and Elizabethtown with two outstanding wrestlers in Bob McKe and Frank Prince.

The last standings released by the Midland Independent have the Wilkes grapplers in sixth position behind West Chester, Lebanon, Harlan, Army, and Penn State. An outstanding performance by the Colonels will certainly enhance their chances of advancing up the chart in the final standings that are to be released March 16. The Colonels, rated as co-favorite with Wilkes in the tournament, is rated in eleventh place in the most recent poll, just behind the Pitt Panthers.
