Complaints, Suggestions Aired Before IDC Meeting

Last Monday night at IDC was “What’s your bag?” or gripe night, euphemistically speaking, and no one could disappoint. One girl, swinging, lasted for over an hour, centered around caustic specifics such as open house and dorm room, and glittering generalities such as lack of communication and conflict in interests. The meeting climaxed with the decision that Deans Ahlborg, Ralston, and Hoover will receive invitations to IDC’s next meeting.

The women did most of the talking Monday night. It seems that on Saturday morning of last week the girls were told “at the last minute” that no male visitor was allowed above the first level of the dormitories. It was reported that an attempt was made Saturday morning to contact both Deans. Mrs. Ahlborg stated that it was not in his jurisdiction to make a ruling on the opening of dorm rules in the men’s dormitories. Consequently, the IDC representatives questioned the meaning and significance of open house, which is conducted three times per year, if it is expressly limited to men’s dorms only.

The girl went on further to state that the residence directors have assumed or are now given exclusive power over the dormitory executive council proceedings. At one point in the meeting a suggestion was made to form an organization of women dormitory presidents for the purpose of solving their problems. For a few days ago, one girl was threatened with a campus by a girl for having her room untidy.

Another gripe was the fact that girls were expressly forbidden to close the blinds or curtains in the lounges. In some dorms, despite the curtains, lights are locked at 11 p.m., midnight, or 1 a.m. depending upon the dormitory, its house mother, and her reason.

The final portion of the meeting regarding the social inactivity was brought forth concerning the limited hours and fees of the gymnasium, which are raised concerning the possibility (again) of locating ciga- rette machines in dorms and argument behind not having such machines now. Finally, off-campus living has been given such service in relation to its allotted budget were discussed. It was resolved that all these matters will be investigated and that those involved will be apprised so that a clearer understanding of the issues will result.

Head of Mathematics, Dr. Bing Wong, Views New Teaching Method

by Ronald Jacobs

With his feet propped up on his office desk, Dr. Bing K. Wong was relaxing. Though the newest member of the math department gave all the impression of being an established pro at the art, nothing could be farther from the truth. Not only did he remind him of what had to be done in the near future. The blackboard in his right was filled with circles. Inside the circles weren’t radii, diameters, or chords; inside them were the names of people to see and things to do that day.

The board, upon closer observation, revealed that there must have been intercourse between studies also. The telltale marks of erasers has transformed the originally blank surface into a profusion of names. This reporter’s name was one of the circles, and as he arrived in the office he found himself in the hot seat of a group of faculty members and by stiffening his back he was able to correctly instruct him.

Dr. Wong, born in Shanghai, Chi- na, came to this country ten years ago for a college education after his graduation from high school in Hong Kong. Dr. Wong emphasizes the communica- tion and idiomatic qualities of the English language presented for- midable problems for him during his initial years in the United States. However, he was helped greatly by the fact that he had studied English as a foreign lan- guage while in China. After spending a year at Oklahoma A&M College, Dr. Wong attended Kansas State College for two years, receiv- ing his A.B. in 1961.

From there he went on to the University of Illinois where he was the recipient of a teaching fellowship, and acquired his M.A. and Ph.D. Dr. Wong taught at Eastern Illinois University and Rochester Institute of Technology before coming to WCC. For the past two summers he has served as visiting lecturer. During his present teaching in the National Student Foundation Summer Institute for College Teachers.

In his few weeks here, Dr. Wong stated, he has found everyone to be very cooperative, and he added that his Wilkie rate with any of his students that have ever taught. “Students now have a better opportunity to learn than they ever had before,” Dr. Wong emphasized. “I find myself teaching undergraduates material which I have learned in graduate school. He remarked that the degree of personal contact between the students and faculty is much greater here than at the larger schools with which he has had experience. Dr. Wong aims to strengthen the department by recruiting additional faculty members and by satisfying the requirements of math majors.

Our discussion turned to the subject of math, a new one which is be- ing taught in grade schools. The math is not new, Dr. Wong explained, in the method of teaching it that is new. Due to these new methods of teaching, he elaborated, the child is forced to think as well as calculate. However, there are in- herent dangers in new methods, according to Dr. Wong commented vaguely. The con- cepts of new math are often as un- familiar to teachers as they are to students, and in many cases the teachers must learn these concepts on their own. They must learn the concepts properly and unfortunate- ly are not able to correctly instruct...
A McCarthy Worker
Writes Her Memoirs

by Maureen Klaphorst, News Editor

As election night approaches uncer tainly, little has been decided. But some have decided to make some feminine ob ter a priority. Through campaigning and with some degree of relief, it will be nice to know that barring the arriva tion of World War IV or some other major disaster, matu rity will come and bring the vote. Those of us who are old enough to vote before they are 21, and, second, many peo ple are never mature enough to vote.

If maturity alone is to determine a citizen's eligibility to vote, then some criteria other than age must be found to terminate maturity. But attempts to find such criteria in the past, such as literacy tests, have usually resulted in discriminatory use, whereby suffrage is denied to persons because of race, religion, divergent political views, etc., rather than lack of maturity.

There are not yet available sufficient safeguards to prevent misuse of criteria other than age in determining maturity. Until such safeguards are found, age, is at least, acceptable. But there is danger in setting the age too high. A large portion of those who contribute to the country in terms of taxes, and sometimes lives, are denied a voice in determin ing what they shall contribute.

We do not agree with those who say that military experi ence is proof of maturity, for to best serve in the military a person must be mature, it is the last quality de sired in a voter. A voter should be psychologically independent when determining for whom he shall vote. Maturity is not accurately defined when it is defined in terms of military ser vice or obedience.

But psychological independence is perhaps greatest among college-age individuals. Those who are younger are psycholog ically dependent on parents, and those who are older are psy chologically dependent on society's norms. To lower the vot ing age to 18 would increase the independent trends of the voting public as a whole, but only slightly, for few young people vote.

To lower the voting age, and then to get out the young vot ers, would probably disrupt the entire American political system, and it is desperately in need of such disruption. But a lowered voting age in Pennsylvania, or in the country as a whole, is unlikely right now. Even more unlikely, perhaps im possibly, is increasing the number of young who would actu ally vote.

Lowering the voting age, thus, would probably add only several hundred thousand actual voters to voting lists, al though it does have the potential of adding several million. It would mean very little in the actual elections, but it would mean much in terms of fairness.

If age, when used as a synonym for maturity, is permitted to prevent citizens, defined in terms of contributions to the country, from voting, then something is unfair. Fairness de mands that the voting age be lowered.

Congratulations

The Beacon would like to extend its congratulations to the Wilkes football team on reaching the quarter century mark in consecutive football victories. Such an accomplishment, while unusual in college football ranks, is, we feel, consistent with the caliber of the Wilkes athletic program and reflects favorably on the College as a whole.

HIPPIE PAPERS CALLED SHOCKING AND JOLTING

by Lynn Snyder

The Hippie Papers is a collection of essays, news stories, cartoons, and editorials which appeared in recent months in publ ications currently termed "under ground." The collection of such articles, which has obviously taken its time and patience, is to make those who are out of the pulling core youngsters of today. The editor of these quasi-adults is striving ar

ingly to overcome that which ex ernally called the "hippie generation." This is where the rainiest season of the year. Somehow the editor of the Bea can, Hopkins provides a unique perspective on the use of LSD and other hallucinogenic drugs, and how their use may contribute to a broader understanding of the culture in which they are used. The book also discusses the impact of these drugs on society and the individual. The result is a compelling and thought-provoking exploration of one of the most significant cultural movements of the 20th century.

Pat Paulsen Endorsed For U. S. Presidency

by Ann Somerville

Steve Allen has said that he needs another clown in Washington and Pat Paulsen (among others) has noted that there is no place for an immortal (or immoral as the case may be) rotlag who has purchased his way toward 1960 Pennsylvania Avenue. Paulsen affords the extreme American alternative in 1968.

Every campaign needs a chair, man, a candidate, workers, leaders, followers, a policy and money. Pat Paulsen’s campaign has all of these. In fact, they are so many that it lacks the powerful backing of a huge party machine. And therein lies its distinction and its futility. It is not, as a minor and few and chosen words, a man who is not afraid to speak the truth unimportant issue, a man who is thus not in the usual grain of American politics.

His party, if one can call it, is an organization of an amorphous assortment of semi-devoted followers. His campaign is semi-serious, semi-satirical, but totally unique. Personally, the man is more like Edward Stassen than his semi-constant Harold Stassen, who has little of Paulsen’s personal magnitude and indomitable spirit.

A true visionary, Paulsen believes in our country, right or wrong. When the country is set right, he promises to sit back and let it alone. When the country is wrong, he will sit and laugh at it. As have the other candidates, Paulsen has made major policy statements on Vietnam, riots in the cities and the future of the country.

A compromise measure, he believes we should send all the Negro Americans back to Africa, send everybody else back to Europe, and then start all over. He believes that the majority of America’s problems are due to poor immigration laws by the Indians. Maintaining that bars should not be located within a two-mile radius of schools, Paulsen, if elected president, would remedy the situation he would give the schools two weeks to relocate.

Fund-Raising

In true political fashion, Paulsen has struck out with new and original ways of raising campaign funds. Beginning his major fund-raising drive, "you sell 100 semi-sold kisses" for 25 cents each, (extra-special kisses 50 cents), his success was semi-large.

"It's a strategy kiss. At this time the candidate for the throne turned to selling lemonade and presidential kisses. The location of this drive was a spectacular $.89 plate dinner at Horn and Hardart's, attended by some of the most notable names in the theatrical business. (Not unlike the recent conventions.) Like his opponents, Paulsen is adept in the use of coatals.

His complaint was that his supporters could have afforded $1.25. Paulsen’s promises have not been initiated by selfish motives. Under the general semi-direction of Tom Smothers, his campaign is complete with hats, buttons and slogan. Maintaining that "we can’t stand pat," Paulsen has proved that an ordinary citizen can choose the course of events in this country. The greatest moment of his campaign was the convention where he was unanimously selected as a candidate for the office of President of the United States. A man who refuses to temporize on the present situation.

Paulsen refuses to accept the sincere of the Vice-President, should he be offered to him. Should he lose, he will do as Barry Goldwater did in 1964 — go back home and sporadically whistle "Hail to the Chief." His movement is perhaps ephemeral, and perhaps the man is something of an anarchist in the modern-day politics, when one must not be an iconoclast, when one
Campus Woman
by Kathy Koperchain

A decade ago most of us were in the eight-to-12-year-old bracket, clothed in pajamas and curls. But while we were in grade school, what was the average coat of 1958 wearing on the college campus?

Ten years can make a big difference in the style of clothes a cord wears. In 1958 the biggest fashion fad was the chemise or the sack. It was an unbuttoned look, a relaxed look. The chemise was free-falling at the waist and it had a fitted midriff or tightly pulled belt. It was much easier to put on a sack dress in her wardrobe.

Of course, there was always the standard skirt and blouse outfit, although quite different from the look of today. In 1958, hosiery began to be more closely fitted, three to four inches below the knee. The skirt was usually straight with a kick pleat in the back, and the blouse was short-sleeved with a fly-away collar. A cardigan sweater, worn with the sleeves pulled up halfway down the arm, completed the outfit.

Crew socks replaced nylons, and sneakers and saddle shoes were seen on the coed. For a dressy affair, a variation of the “bubble” dress could be worn. This was a loosely fitted dress with a tight bubble at the waist which produced the effect of a large bubble. Shoes with pointed toes and spike heels were considered appropriate with such an outfit.

In 1958 the most popular hairstyle was the ponytail with short, curly bangs. Straight hair was rarely seen in those days, and curly hair was “in.” Bright, red was the fashionable shade for both lipstick and nail polish. But here we are now in 1968. Straight hair and soft lipstick shades are most popular, although many of today’s fashion magazines never modelle wearing red lipstick and curly hair. The mid-length in skirts and coats is also reminiscent of the 1950s.

A revival of the fashion trend of ten years ago? Maybe the retailers are seeing a new boom in sales, but the skirt and the short, curly hairstyles are still popular and probably will be a while. Give any coed her choice and she will probably pick the styles of 1968.

Circle K Club Always Busy On Projects

by Jessica Mahler

The Circle K members comprising a cross-section of Wilkes students, is, without a doubt, one of the most active clubs on campus. George Pawlish, president of the club, says, “You name it, we do it.”

This year the club was in charge of the United Fund campaign at the College. For the most part the campaign signs could be seen all over campus as the club made an all-out effort to further their community project.

Along with this campaign, the Circle K conducted tours of the campus on Parents’ Day. Parents’ Day was also set aside as one of its projects—a men’s beauty contest. During the Thanksgiving break the club plans to paint an orphanage.

Not only do the men of the Circle K Joel Ferrier in charge of the campaign, but they also give of themselves. President Pawlish seemed particularly proud of the fact that his group donated 198 pints of blood for the American Red Cross in the community who were in need of it.

Organized with the purpose of favoring college students, fraternity leaders and good citizens, the Circle K of Wilkes College undoubtedly fulfills this purpose. As Mr. Pawlish says, the philosophy behind Circle K, that of being men of having initiative, and displaying unselfish service to others, certainly the achievement of the group who also holds the philosophy also holds true for the students at Wilkes.

Yet one more exciting characteristic which stands out in all the members of the Circle K is that it is composed of one of the happiest groups of workers around. When asked how he found time to organize all these projects, Pawlish, who was busy with yet another job, didn’t seem to hear, “Projects? he said, “Oh yeah, we do millions of things.” And they do, too.

Drexel at Albright

The Albright Lions hit favored Delaware Valley give an unexpected upset last week and should be able to gather up enough strength for their rain-soaked turf and surprised the Aggies, 10-6. Modified things look now, the Lions should hold the Dragons scoreless in the Lions' den.

Juniata at Lebanon Valley

Juniata hit the win column again last week by defeating Lycoming and with the win will provide the Indians with their second consecutive victory. Poor Hav- erford is still trying for win num- ber one, but I doubt if it will come at Juniata's expense.

Juniata 30 Haverford 0

Susquehanna at Lebanon Valley

The Crusaders will be on the road again for this encounter with arch-rival Lycoming. The Warriors received a thorough smashing from Juniata last week but should be able to recuperate in time this week. Susquehanna should make it a battle, but the familiar environment and partisan fans give the Warriors the edge.

Delaware Valley at Lock Haven

The Aggies have won the last two contests, one in a nine-point defeat, and two in a five-point advantage, and should be ready to roll this week against Lock Haven. Lock Haven is a newcomer to the Del Val schedule, and in this non-con- current affair the Aggies will win.

Del Val 21 Lock Haven 13

Lebanon Valley at Moravian

Lebanon Valley was idle last weekend while Moravian scored a win on a rain-soaked PMC field, 30-27. The Dutchmen stand 3-0 on the season thus far and will undoubtedly attempt to make it four in a row.

King's Point at PM

It's possible that Wagner has just dropped out of the running for this year's Lambies because a second quarter blow it was received from Tufts. King's point gathered its fifth win of the season as the Ephs previously beaten C. W. Post, 16-9. It is the third win in a row for Wagner and will go down to defeat for the third time this season as Coach George overpowers them.

Upsilon at Wilkes

Number one in the nation, a little shaky for a while last week as the sog- gey field and inclement weather seemed to turn the Blue Bombers an added advantage. It was definite- ly a "rain-out." The Colonels on the other hand, were sans rain, but with Ithaca gone and a good lesson learned, they should be ready to handle the Wilkes offense. So it might be mentioned that Upsilon was the big winner, but with the Colonels of Rollie Schmidt three seas- ons back. The Vikings will def- initely be seeking an upset win, but it looks as if the Colonel express should streak on to number 28.

The Wilkes College soccer team swept to its third consecutive vic- tory last weekend by blanking Stevens Tech, 2-0. The Colonels now stand 4-2 in Mid Atlantic Conference play in third place.

The Stutemen fielded a team comprised mainly of talented, foreign play- ers with a general lack of teamwork. The well-disciplined charges of Coach Jim Nedoff took charge from the sidelines and usually con- trolled the play on the rain-drenched, soggy field.

The first Colonial marker was the product of a left corner-kick by Bill Murphy and an excellent place for a goal by Dov Solomianski. This score was made in the begin- ning of the second period. Murphy again assisted on the second goal as he set up a blast from senior Dave Ralston. Ralston drilled the shot into the corner of the Tech net virtually untouched by the goalie.

The defense was led by Jerry Varekem and Ed Manda as they thwarted the Stutemen all after- noon on the slippery turf. The line accounted for 34 saves in goal while the Stutemen only got 11 attempts at the Wilkes net.

Colonial victory was celebrated after the game, "The low score doesn't indicate the true character of the game," said Coach Nedoff. "I was satisfied with our performance to- day. Actually, I was very much afraid of leaving here with a tie."

During the past few games, the linemen have proven they can put the ball into the net when they have to. However, the main prob- lem at the beginning of the season and Coach Nedoff's chief concern. The Colonels' trip to Staten Is- land this afternoon for a contest with the Wagner Seahawks. The men of Coach Nedoff will be gun- ning for their fourth win in a row.

New Addition

Aids Booters

Dov Solomianski

by Don Spruck

Within the past three weeks, the Wilkes College soccer team was fortunate to acquire the services of Dov Solomianski, a student from Israel with a talented toe.

Dov (which means bear in He- brew) was born in Germany in 1960, but has made Israel his home. He participated in various sports while in high school and played soccer at Wingate Junior College—a team which went on to garner several Israeli national championships. He also played with a national team at Haifa.

The freshman lineman joined the Colonial booters recently and in three games has accounted for five goals and possibly was the deter- mining factor in the booters' recent surge.

Dov graduated from Wingate as a high school education and major and he received his degree from Wilkes plans to enter the diplomatic field on an international level. He plans to return to Israel and possibly join the foreign ministry. His back- ground is quite varied and interest- ing. He served as a sergeant in the Israeli army during the "Six Days War" and has traveled extensively throughout Europe. He is an avid sports enthusiast and loves the game of soccer.

While at Wilkes he is residing with a family in Kingston. He is also holding part-time employment at the Jewish Community Center as a physical education major.

When what he comments concerned life in the United States, he said, "I like the United States and the people I have met here are very friendly and helpful. However, I do not particularly care for the busy and hurried atmosphere of a typical day. I prefer a much slower pace."

After this last word, Dov hurried off to practice as preparation for the upcoming Colonial game.

Soccer Team Blanks Stevens Institute, 2-0

By John Reese, Athletic Director

This year should prove to be an interesting one, to say the least, for Wilkes College wrestling. The loss of six varsity wrestlers will provide the opportunity for all those who want to wrestle on a varsity level. With practices starting this week we hope there will be enough talent to fill the void. With 14 meets scheduled against good competition, we're going to need all the help we can get.

Fortunately, we have some outstanding wrestlers returning from last year's squad. Andy Matviak, fourth in the NCAA tournament; John Martin, fifth in the same tournament; and Joe Wiendi, national champion at 160-pounds, bring with them a winning attitude that should permeate throughout the team. Other wrestlers who did an outstanding job for us last year and who should be even better this year are: Bill Harris, Den- nis Verzera, Gary Willets, Rich Cecconi, and Ron Fritts.

Additional help should come from Steve Kachenshba, a varsity wrestler two years ago, and transfers Ralph Truesbury, Braise Lott, and Tom Grant. Several outstanding freshmen should give us the balance and depth we need for a successful season.

Last year we lost two meets—one of which we should have won. This year we are hoping to avenge those setbacks and regain the MAC championship. We were ranked fifth nationally at the beginning of the season and we did finish fifth in the college division tournament. This year we hope to improve this position.

Naturally, to attain these goals, our wrestlers are going to have to work hard and "pay the price." If they are willing to do this and if the student body gives us the support a winning team needs, we will make Wilkes proud of us.

Our first meet will be a quadangular at Oneonta State University on December 7. Other institutions also entered are: University of Buffalo, Montclair State University, and the host school. Our first meet here at home fans will be on December 16 and our opponent will be Springfield College. The wrestlers will exhibit desire, pride, and attitude—the cheering fans will exhibit the enthusiasm and support!

Tackle Bruce Constock provides a wall of protection and ample running room for fullback Vince Varmol's dominant second-quarter action in the Colonels' thrilling 28-19 victory over Ithaca. The bruising back collected 91 total yards on 22 carries.

Programs for the Colonels' clash with the Vikings of Upsala College tomorrow afternoon will be sold by the Women's Athletic Association. The price which will be charged is necessitated by the additions which have been made—photographs, sta- tus, etc.

The Wilkes College Colonels' surprising 31-0 win over Delaware Valley College has proven more costly to the locals than anyone might have imagined. Quarterback Joe Zakowski suffered serious leg injuries and may be lost for the remainder of the season. This is quite a damaging blow — both to the team and to the 627, 200-pound south-paw from Hanover.

Zakowski's 47-yard touchdown pass to Frank Bozzi was expected by Colonels fans — almost as much as a habit as a Joe Wiendl "miracle." This proven ground-gainer was a definite asset to the squad's arsenal of offensive plays and had a worth in many games. At crucial times such as this, depth is the only answer — fortunately, Rick Simonson and Joe Frappoldt can step in and still wield an experienced hand. Both these men deserve a better fate and the next few games will provide the opportunity both men have been waiting for. Too bad the situation had to be created through an injury.

In any event, the familiar number 10 will definitely be missed on Saturday afternoons.

After three consecutive victories, the King's College football club is listed as one of the top ten club teams in the nation. Coach Ed Brominski has instilled a winning attitude and players out on the field will be interesting to see if intercollegiate varsity football will be resumed at the institution. I would like to extend my congratulations to the squad members and wish them continued success for the remainder of the year. Tomorrow afternoon the Monarchs play host to Catholic University in a homecoming contest.

THAT'S A NO NO. Umpire Kazmir Wysoki is about to signal a penalty as he notices an infraction in last weekend's victory. Quarterback Rick Simonson is trying to sweep the end as Ted Yanger provides the blocking.

Kings Point Moves To 2nd In Lambert Poll

by Tom Demovic

The Wilkes College Colonels ran their undefeated string to 25 last weekend by edging the Blue Bombers of Ithaca College, 28-19. The battle was staged on a rain-drenched Rainier Field as the combatants slugged and sloshed their way through the mud and rain.

Bringing back memories from hard-fought contest was strictly a defensive victory. Defensive backs Joe Wiendl and Jay Holdill each bagged the kill in four for scores in the second half. Wiendl gathered in a high punt on his own five-yard line, broke two tackles, and then picked his way behind solid blocking to paydirt. Holdill intercepted a last minute desperation, Mike Podlucky aerial on the 49-yard marker and scored the Colonels' final touchdown with time to run out. Dan Melloy upheld his dignity as a member of the Colonels secondary as he crippled three Bomber aerials.

The initial half was all defense — Wilkes defense, that is. Paul Merilli, Bill Rayden, John Howe, and John Kotera burst through the Ithacans' line continuously causing numerous backfield mistakes. At one point in the second quarter, Podlucky hit John Cogswell, and later to Mike Butterfield, "We've got to do something about that line. I don't have enough time back there to do anything," Ithaca was held to 36 net yards gained in the first half of play and failed to gain one first down...

The locals completed 10 of 23 remaining in the first half, Larry Nevill crashed through Wilkes' line and blocked Bill Stake's punt. Teammate Jack Mix fell on the loose ball on the Colonels' three-yard line. With first and goal on the three, "Wilkes' fine-webbed blocks, and the赋vious two grid seasons, the east had their work cut out for them in the league and the half was still short of the goal, the line judge detected a Wilkes infraction and decided to give the Bombers an extra-shot for a score. The battered defense couldn't stop the six inches and Ithaca had seven points on the board. An interesting sideline light was made by Coach Rollie Schmidt to the timekeeper, "How can anyone team run a football for 6½ inches?" The official did not even attempt a reply.

The locker room was cluttered with bandages and dirt. The mud-splattered faces were staring at the floor — anticipating their leader's comments. Coach Schmidt walked to the chalk-board, pointed to the number 25 on it, and candidly asked, "Well, how badly do you really want this win? How much do you or do you really have?" After few comments and a silent prayer, he extended the ruling forcefully, "Now let's get out there and win this one." With that comment, the sweet and black gunners charged the turf. The locals displayed their pride in 11 seconds as the half ended and eventually sent the upset Ithacans to their fourth defeat in a row.

After the game, Coach Schmidt was quoted as saying, "Boy, I'm glad I'm glad I'm out of this one alive." Tomorrow the Colonels will be out to prove to the homoseasons that the Ithaca encounter was "just one of those things." They will be at and may be to Coach Jim Collyer and the fact that they are number one. Tomorrow the opposition will be the Division of Vikings — oh, those poor Vikings.
