SECOND PERFORMANCE OF "KING DAVID" WILL BE PRESENTED BY CHORAL CLUB

By Miriam Long

Because of popular demand, the Wilkes College Choral Club will present its second performance of the oratorio, KING DAVID, by Arthur Honegger at St. John's Lutheran Church on Sunday evening, May 21 at 7:30 P.M. This performance will be a musical performance rather than a religious service.

St. John's Church is a large, red brick structure located near the north end of the campus. The family room of the church, which was recently redecorated by the Choral Club, will be used for this performance.

The concerts will be conducted by William Griffiths, who is associated with the Milwaukee Symphony Orchestra.

The Choral Club of Wilkes College is one of the finest college choral groups in the nation and has earned many awards and honors for its performances.

Beacon Reporter Applauds "Golden Boy"; Presents New Cavalcade of Corn and Gags

BY CHUCK GLOMAN

One 'c 'ustin's top-notch production of "Golden Boy" won the object of many chuckles last Friday night, and even though everyone seemed to be having a good time I doubt if anyone was as greatly amused as I.

You see, my girl and I went on a double date with a very enjoyable couple.

The fellow, Bolivar Snipziff, had to go home last week. He was almost killed by a wasp. After that he refused to eat anything but cheese and he didn't hear the wasp.

As we walked down North Main Street, he turned and asked, "What has three noses, seven teeth, six paws, and bitches smoke?"

"What?" I asked.

"I don't know," he replied soberly, "but it's following us ever since...."

Now don't get the idea that Bolivar is an alcoholic. He just likes to take a nip once in a while to steady his nerves. But one day last week his nerves were so steady he couldn't even move.

He was quite the boy back in his Army days. Whenever he heard a strange noise while on guard duty, he always thought, "Who Went There?"

I inclined to think that Bolivar is a bit near-sighted...a few days ago, the wind blew off his buggy and ran after a peckin' dog for three blocks.

After we walked a few blocks, he stopped and pointed with pride to what he termed an 'automobile.' "Climb in, Chuck," he exclaimed proudly.

"How do I open the door?" I asked, a bit puzzled.

"Just slide it off the hinges," he replied.

After whizzing through the streets, he brought the ancient thing to a halt in front of his girl's house.

"We're here," he announced to a girl, "Chuck, don't you just love Greek myths?"

"Yes, it was," I answered.

Then she asked, "Chuck, don't you just love Greek myths?"

"Naw," I replied. "I just like Greek girls."

"Bolivar," by the way, is the found of the editorial section of that new magazine for carnivals, "Eaters' Digest.""

"Was this for me, I stick to writing songs. My latest tune was recorded by the Para-Dice," he told me. You've heard Vaughn Monroe singing it - "Snaggle Fingers.""

In the four of us left Tillie's house, Bolivar turned to his girl and whispered, "Tillie, before we went out I want you to know that I'm going to drive all the way with you.

"Oh, really?" she gaped, with romantic twinkle in her eye. Then she added innocently, "Why are you going to drive with one woman?"

"I have to hold the fender on with my other one," he replied.

FLASH! The purpose for the yellow scratch on the blackboard...
HOMER BIDS FAREWELL TO WILKES—BUT THEN IT AIN'T NECESSARILY SO

Homer Bones gazed at the ominous-looking rope hanging over his head.

"This is the end," he thought. "I can't graduate—one qual-edit short. What's the use? I can't go on.

His body shook with uncontrollable sobs.

"Why waste years? Wasteful—graduating—all because I know that Michelangelo lived on the third floor rear in a quadrangle house and mixed paints with a brush—oh, I gave up. I should have known it—everyone else climbed up on the stacks, past the psychology texts, jigsaw books, and the latest volumes. He reached over and lifted the roped rope to his loops, his hands burning, and the knot correctly placed an ear for the most effective hanging. Homer gazed sadly at his cluttered desk and his colle-istyled room.

Then just the door burst open. Homer whirled Don Pullman, Art Bloom, and Tom Robbins enter the room. They did not notice him.

"Well, look," said Art. "This will be the last issue of the Beacon this year. How are we going to finish Homer off? If he can't appear on the Wilkes campus next year we should do a good job

Homer slipped the rope from his neck and crouched behind Great Expectations to listen.

"Shall we hang him?" asked Tom.

Homer looked carefully at the rope with the loop and the big knot and shook his head.

"How about poison?" queried
Don. Homer shuddered and slipped a sen-sen into his mouth.

"Where is Homer?" asked Art.
"He was going to get his marks and then come right back. He should have been here by this time."

Homer cringed slightly. "Are these my friends?" he thought.
"These people who are going to kill me? Oh, well, who cares? I'm going to kill myself anyway!"

Art spotted the gallow's first. Homer was discovered too.

Homer burst into tears when his was discovered. He sobbingly told his friends of his troubles.

"I know. You're thinking about your marks or about us killing Willie. I was going to knock off in the Beacon, not in real life," said Don.

"Don, can I go with you?" asked Homer. "Take me with you, Don, please?"

"Don't you like Wilkes?" questioned Art.

"No, I'm not going to grade and I want to go with Don. Since he has beauty marks, he is still junior and don't need coming out into the world, and I want to help him."

Will you come back to visit us once in a while and asked Tom.

"If you want me to," said Homer.
"I'm acting like a freshman who doesn't like me though."

"Don't worry about them, Homer.

"I'm glad I didn't kill myself,"

Homer turned away and wiped his eyes. "I wouldn't want to lose good friends like you. That's our Homer!"

THEATRE GROUP PERFORMS FOR HIGH SCHOOLS

Six Cue 'n Curtain members have traveled to a number of high schools to further the students' interest in the legitimate theatre by presenting a one-act play, "Class And Pressed". During this tour, the group did much to promote public relations between Wilkes College and the local high schools. Participating were "Skinny" Ko-

nis, Bachman; Gloe, Ann Bells Pier-y, Earl Wolfe and Diana Campus.

Jane Guruch served as director.

The group has performed for the students of Meyers, G.A.K., Coughlin, West Wyoming, Newport and Plymouth, and expects to eventually put on the play for all remaining local schools.

In one scene of the play, "Skinny" is awaiting the return of his trowsers from the cleaners, has a hard time avoiding callers who come to the door at this embar-barrassing time. One can safely say that skinny said "this leading role in the comedy of school life has appeared without his pants before more audiences than any other member of Cue 'n

Curtain.

4 Students Awarded Wilkes Scholarships

Two of four general academic Wilkes scholarships valued at $4,000, were won by Kingston High School seniors as the highest scored in a competitive examination taken last month by 30 students from 30 regional secondary schools, it was announced by Hon.

Pepper, student-director and director of admissions.

The winning two scholarships were awarded students from Bernington and Kingston.

Two scholarships were valued at $1,200 each and the other two were set at $600 each.

Writers of the scholarships are:

Nancy Lee Hanney, Kingston, $1,200; Michael James Lewis, Kinton, $1,200; Annelia Bonaventura

Lamb, $600, and Bernard Peters, Berwick, $600.

The four students attained high marks in the competitive examination given at Wilkes College on April 20. More than 155 students from Limerne and surrounding counties took the examination.

The scholarships were offered to students graduating from high school in 1916 who made an outstanding record in the admission test and were in good standing for admission to Wilkes College. Students who applied to take the scholarship examination had to rank in the upper quarter of their class in good standing for admission to Wilkes College by April 26.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

This column is open to any and all readers for their comments. Views expressed here do not necessarily reflect endorsement from the BEACON. All letters must be typed and signed by the writer. For the issue, Friday issue only letters must be submitted to the BEACON by noon of the preceding Wednesday.

Dear Editor:

Can you find a little space in this week’s BEACON to bring students’ concern that the Library’s perennial problem will be the same again, and have found that 175 volumes have been lost during the last months. A large number of these were among those lost between September and Christmas, 1949. Further, the total of those lost in the last four months is slightly smaller than the amount discovered missing late in December. Taken together, the percentage of returns and the decrease in rate of loss is encouraging. Much of the credit for this can be attributed to the efforts of the BEACON to make the student body aware of the magnitude of the deprivation.

If you will have someone write an article intended to emphasize the students to return stray books, and to discourage them from taking additional ones I will be very grateful. Your writer might frame the column as an appeal to their pride. He might point to the good response of the students to the January appeal to return books. This was a good response but should be very much better, for 256 volumes have been returned since September and still remain unaccounted for.

The few students who are responsible for this loss are still in school, consequently some of them will read the article. They could become proud of themselves and earn laurels for the student body as a whole if they would return them selves just a little bit to gather up the books they have.

Gandhi’s Doctrines Can Be Used To Promote World Peace, Dr. Nayar Tells Wilkes Audience

By GEORGE H. KABUK

Dr. Sushil Nayar speaking to a near-capacity group in the lecture hall yesterday at 11 o’clock said that the use of hatred has never solved any problems. He asserted that the solution to world problems can be Gandhi’s policy of non-cooperation and the policy of non-violence. Basically these policies are the expression of truth and justice.

Discussing the announcement that she was Gandhi’s personal doctor, Dr. Nayar explained that Gandhi considered nothing personal, his service was dedicated to the people.

Dr. Nayar stated that Gandhi’s great contribution to the world was an emphasis on means as opposed to ends, and that in this new world of scientific thought, one major step to peace and lasting world order is to recognize the idea of non-violence and non-cooperation.

Gandhi knew that war and violence was not the answer. “War kills! Love gives life.” With this idea in mind Gandhi adapted the idea of non-violence and non-cooperation.

Gandhi thought that with the policy of non-cooperation evil would cease to exist because good would withdraw from a struggle evil would now stop.

There is only a temporary squelching of evil. By practicing non-violence, Gandhi contended that men don’t do evil because they want to, but because they are not educated. He added that the people of India didn’t favor a strict non-violence policy but that there were enough believers to house a national consciousness of the British control.

Dr. Nayar declared that we are at the beginning—"...we must explore deeper into the field of non-violence. India doesn’t pretend to have solved all her problems. However, she does believe that she is on the right road. Dr. Nayar recommended that if the United States wishes to succeed over communism, we must do a bit house cleaning ourselves. This statement is directed at the theories of democracy. We must practice democracy before we preach it to the world.

Gandhi’s policies are helping India to pull herself up by the bootstraps. Dr. Nayar said that all the people of India didn’t favor a strict non-violence policy but there were enough believers to house national consciousness of the British control.

The forces of love and truth can be called to effect in the community and can be expanded to operate successfully on a larger scale.

MEET THE COLONELS

By JOE GRIES

Norton Both came to Wilkes College from Kingston High School. He is a pitcher and the first Colonels' baseball player this spring. The enthusiasm he holds for the game is also displayed when he plays his turn on the mound for the Colonels. After every inning you can find Norton on the bench going over every play with his coach. He doesn't care if he did wrong, I don't think there was ever any baseball player who was as interested in the game as Norton Both.

Both didn't start the season as a regular pitcher for the Wilkes team, but it wasn't long before he did get a chance to shine in the game and when the opportunity presented itself he made the most of it by winning over Wyoming Seminary.

In his next outing against Kenton, he won again on a masterful performance.

Most lost his next decision against Susquehanna University but then rebounded in his next outing. He spoiled his downfall and Zigmund was brought in to throw the ball, and Zigmund was forced to finish the game.

Bob Hall is a pitcher playing his third season on this year's Colonels team. The Rahway, New Jersey boy probably has best form of the whole outfield.

As a junior as far as first basemen go, but for what he lacks in size he more than makes up in fighting the ball. In his first year as a Colonels he played right field with Frank Evan at the initial back. Toward the end of that season Bob took over and finished the season with a good record on the defense and defense.

In his second year, Bob again played right field, but only this year he got in more games and displayed a huge amount of pepper.

This year, Coach Rahlan placed Hall on the first base. Bob has been turning in at that stroke. Hall has been able to crack the starting lineup on too many occasions. When I went to see Coach Rahlan he showed that he hadn't lost any of his pepper and skill.

This 115-pounder is a junior at Wilkes. Last year, he also played for the Rahway High School team as a lineman.

John Morgan from Rahway High School and played baseball with that school.

Educator Discusses Student Government

Houston, Tex.—(T.P.)—"I always have had the feeling that student government was a lost sheep around the campus," Dr. W. W. Kemmer, president of the University of Houston, told a joint session of student government recently. "It always seems silly to me to legislate among students you can't do anything about," he said in referring to a bill passed by students several years ago.

Wilkes and King's Under the Arcs Tonight

WILKES COLLEGE BEACON

By JOE GRIES

Tonight Coach Bostin and his Wilkes Colonels basketball team will play in the first night game ever played at Artillery Park.

This contest will be the first part of the twin bill with Wilkes-Barre meeting Hartford in the lefty in the regular Eastern League close.

The ball will be of the Colonels taking the field at 5 p.m.

The Colonels have fielded the best nine ever to represent King's College. In the first engagement Wilkes roughed over the boys from Northampton street to the tune of 9 to 2. Lefty Chet Mott took this game and coasted through a neat performance.

John Zigmund, the Colonels' catcher, will probably get the call from Rahlan to start this contest. If he does start the contest, the ball player will be seeking sixth victory in seven starts. His only loss came from Bloomfield STC in a close contest.

This contest will be of interest in two ways. First the boys will be seeking a victory in the Colonial tournament and second it will give them a chance to perform on a good playing field. Both factors are of prime importance to the final outcome of any game and this one will be no different. In one game last year's team played on this field the boys were so surprised at the billiard-like infeld that they kicked the ball all over King's and lost a Comedy of Errors to Illinois College. Let's hope this won't happen again.

The long ball hitters in the Colonels' lineup like Michael, Dragon, Skordinski and Blankenbusch will find the fences that encircle the park very tempting. Only two Wilkes performers ever hit the ball over those fences and they were Moose Galleta and Marty Warmus. Both of these raps came in the same year and in the same game.

This is the year to add to that number and why not start in this game!

If there is any advantage that goes to a team for playing under the arcs, then King's will have the edge on the Colonels in this department. The Monarchs played Lycoming College under the lights at Ithaca College last week, and beat the Warrior nine.

This edge probably won't mean anything because Wilkes isn't Lycoming and they support a better baseball team.

Let's make this the largest turn-out ever to witness a Wilkes baseball game and don't forget your student activity pass will be the only admission to the ball game.

After this contest the Colonels will play Upstate College tomorrow in a home tilt, Ithaca College in a night game at Ithaca on May 25, and finish off the season against Bloomfield on Saturday night.

This being the last season until the fall I would like to relate that the Colonels has been a great pleasure to work with this year's team and the staff and we hope that you will come to see Vince Macrì who will join the un-employed in June.
