SPIRIT OF INITIATION
SQUELCHES REBELLIOUS FRESHMEN

The disciplined freshman staggered out of the Freshman Assembly and to his mother's horror, announced he had just been unmercifully beaten by the heartless and sinister characters of the Freshman and Sophomore Tribunals. The brave tribune to the judge; the attorneys and the jury. The blood oozed from his wounds and a scream torn through the halls. He pulled a small package from his pocket and examined it. It contained loaded pistols and a pocket-money canteen. He threw the package away; he would have no use for it. His courage was drained by the blow of revenue. Yes, he would have his revenge. His shrill hysterical laughter pierced the quiet halls.

College football returns to Wyoming Valley tomorrow night when the Colonels clash with the University of Bridgeport at Huber Stadium, Plymouth. The Colonels will be up after their tenth straight victory. The Colonel streak started with a win over Hartwick in their third game last year, and since then they have gone to the wars eleven times and have only two ties to mar an otherwise perfect record. Included in their list of victims have been such schools as Bloomsburg, Kings, Rider, and during the past week Upsala was added to the impressive list.

Last week as we all know the Colonels travelled to East Orange, N. J. and handed Upsala a Defeat 18-7. The highlight of that game was the 78 yard touchdown jaunt by a former All-State griddler from New York state, Al Nicholas. Al is a newcomer to the Wilkes Campus and you are destined to hear a lot about this boy for the next couple of years. It would have been poetic justice if Jack Decker, a New Jersey boy playing in his own back yard, could have scored the winning touchdown against Upsala. But as it is, Jack makes his presence felt in a different way. For the only casualty of last week's game was John Florkiewicz who suffered a broken bone in his back. John is hampered by his injury, it will hurt the Colonels attack considerably as Florkiewicz's Flee Driving plunges are nearly always good for a few points. Wilkes once kick specialist, Jack Penney, seems to have to be under pressure to make the extra points as consistently as he did last year. In two of the three games that Wilkes has played this year, their margin of victory has been at least a touchdown; in each game Penney missed one extra point, but to the St. Francis. Every point counted. Jack was kicked off to a good start by Nicholas' long run brings to mind the fact that Coach Ralston had more than his usual fare of good linemen sitting on the bench. Included in the group are Jim Koehl, Joe Walker, and four from the previous season’s lineup, Al Manarski from Plains, Elias and Solomon from Meyers, and many others... The Colonel roosters are hoping that Mr. Ralston will find himself in a position to let some of these boys start, although he is handicapped by the absence of Carney, Ralston's assistant. Joe Michaelis, who has had the Colonels going through rigorous sessions all week long. In addition to preparing for the upcoming attack, the Colonels have been throwing a lot of passes, so don't be surprised if Wilkes takes to the air frequently. Bob Water and Lee Castle have realized the Colonels' squad and the touchdown twins of last year should see a lot of action in the Bridgeport game tomorrow night. If comparative scores mean anything, and most people insist that they don't; you should see a close game when the Colonels and Bridgeport clash. Wilkes beat Upsala 18-7 while Bridgeport upset East Orange 12-0.

The Colonels' victory streak has aroused a lot of interest in college football throughout the Valley. This should reflect on the attendance at tomorrow night's game as a lot of people will be turning out for the first time to see just how good the Colonels are. Once people start coming to the games, they will realize that the best football played in the valley was played by the Colonels, and that Wilkes will return again and again. This could also apply to quite a few Wilson college students who seem to prefer to watch the local high schools in action rather than their own college team. The Colonels have compiled a record in the four years that they have been competing in inter-collegiate football, of which they can be proud. The team deserves and needs your support; let's show the Colonels and the world that we believe in Wilkes. Attend the games, and back your team.

We proudly announce that our high school predictions are the first to have two right and six wrong. This brings our average up to an astounding .526. No other sports writer can claim such an average.

WILKES BOOTERS PREPARED FOR F&M

By Paul B. Beers

With an away-come with Franklinton at the old stadium, Saturday, Wilkes College's soccer team adds a new touch to its games. The play of the line, in particular, has picked up and the defense has visibly shown up to the point that the Colonels have been forced to prefer to watch the local high schools in action rather than their own college team. Though the Teachers fielded an average college soccer team, F & M promises to have a real top-notch eleven. Deep in the heart of soccer country, the Diplomats are well-versed when it comes to pushing a soccer ball around. The Lancaster team has some style plus the general improvements made during the last two weeks, the Colonels figure to give them a run for their money. The game is coming Saturday in Lancaster.

MR. MARK DAVIDOFF ADDS TO FACULTY

Another new member added to the language department of the Wilkes College for 1949-50 is Mr. Mark Davidoff. He received his Bacheor of Arts degree here at Wilkes and is now working for his masters at Columbia University. He also attended Pennsylvania State College from "41 to "43, furthering his studies in languages.

After spending three years of work in the Army, European theater, he attended the University of Paris for a short length of time, enlarging his knowledge in Spanish and French, also taking a course in French Civilization. Mr. Davidoff feels that the object, or theory of language is to make things known, and as such, he hopes that Wilkes is impressed by the assistant professor and friendliness that surrounds the campus.

Playwriting Contest Winners Announced

Three young veterans of the recent war were announced as winners in a playwriting contest sponsored by the Valparaiso University Players. First prize of $500 was awarded to Samuel Birnkrant, radio and television script writer of New York City, for his play, Rockbound.

Robert John Corcoran, student at Yale University, won the second prize of $250. Third prize and a 25% prize went to Frank D. Gilroy, student at Darmouth College, Hanover N. H.

The contest, which attracted 212 entries, was intended to stimulate original thinking in playwriting and to encourage experimentation in dramatic forms. The one-act form was chosen to encourage young talent. The three plays will be produced by the Valparaiso University Players.

Judges for the contest were Lee Norvelle of Indiana University, Robert Masters of Indiana State University, and Walter Letterman of Purdue University.

Corcoran's play, "The Blackbird," written under the guidance of Dr. Vern Hahn, chairman of the contest committee, said, "Rockbound is a comedy, but a significant one, a comedy of the new social order." Birnkrant's play, "The Case of the Girl in the Attic," written under the guidance of Dr. Vern Hahn, chairman of the contest committee, said, "Rockbound is a comedy, but a significant one, a comedy of the new social order." CAMPUS CHATTER

BY TOM ROBBINS

Grungy f-bombs about our dear, dear Beacon (one of the gripes being that there are too many ads). Nobody actually bothered to throw in the towel and send him away; but elsewhere, however, you will discover that too wild in anticipation of picking my (then) new college mascot. I said that I was persuaded to remain with Campus Chatter and the Beacon.

"I'm through!" I shouted, as I stomped into The Beacon offices. "I've just heard another gripe, and that's what I say! I can't take any more gripes. I quit! If all of these so-called critics think that they can do any better with this sheet, let them try! I've had enough!"

The applause I usually receive for my stirring speeches was somewhat muted, but I heard clearly above the cheers, "Yes, I guess you all want to see me go, don't you? I guess a lot of people on campus would like to see me off the Beacon. I know I never did have the Walter Winchell touch, but I thought that maybe a few months onboard reading Campus Chatter. Well, it was run while it lasted. I never was much good for the Beacon, I guess."

I was crying, now. The tears could not be held back. I buried my head in my arms so that the only sound I could see my red, swollen eyes. A shuffling noise in the room signaled an uncomfortable tension. Maybe they wanted me after all.

"Well, Russ," said one, "that's one column less. Now maybe we can get a good paper."

"Don't take it so hard," I said, raising a forcing a smile. "I guess I could let bygones be bygones and forgive these critics who are wrong."

"Yeah," said Russ, obviously ignoring me to mask his aching heart. "I'll tell you what. I'll write a column and a few news stories in some of the big university papers."

I knew that they were trying to hide their true and feel 'em all with all the concerned talk.

"Okay, fellas, I'll stick with you. I'll continue to write for the Beacon. You don't have to try to hide your feelings anymore."

"We'll do it," I exclaimed. Russ. There was a strange look of amusement on his face. "I knew you did," I ventured, naively.

Seriously though, we have had comments from various sources criticizing the Beacon for the normally large percentage of space that we use for the normal columns. We do not deny that the criticisms are unwarranted. Nonetheless, we do say that the Beacon is currently in the stages of reorganization and that very soon we hope to begin publishing a six-page paper weekly. Weekly! This means that the number of columns used now will not seem to be too many in the future. I think that many campus groups are now beginning to realize that with news will mean a bigger paper in the future.

It is too bad we have to take the time to explain that green is...
