SIXTH ANNUAL CONVOCATION THURSDAY EVENING

DR. GORDON K. CHALMERS TO ADDRESS STUDENTS

Kenyon College President, Lecturer and Writer, Among Youngest Educators in United States

Dr. Gordon Keith Chalmers, who will speak to graduates of Bucknell University Junior College at convocation exercises Thursday evening, June 6, is one of the few, if not the only educator who has been honored with the presidencies of two famous American colleges so early in life.

When only thirty years of age Dr. Chalmers was named President of Rockford College. Now at the age of thirty-six—for three years he has been at Kenyon College—he is now well and ably serving as Kenyon's President. He had served in the chair of the president of Rockford College for three years immediately prior to his inauguration at Kenyon. Before that time Dr. Chalmers, who is a Rhodes Scholar and well known in the field of literature, had taught for five years in the English Department of Mount Holyoke Collge. The first four years he was an instructor and the last year he was appointed assistant professor.

When inaugurated as President of Kenyon College in October of 1937 at ceremonies attended by representatives of more than 200 American and European colleges and universities, Dr. Chalmers, in his inaugural address, said, "The wise man is the one who asks the right kind of questions. I propose that Kenyon shall be the college where they may find their answers from original sources and not at second hand."

An original thinker and a forceful writer, Dr. Chalmers is the author of many papers on modern education.

Dr. Chalmers, the sixteenth president of Kenyon College, was born at Waukesha, Wisconsin, February 7, 1904. He spent his boyhood in Philadelphia and attended school at Lansdowne and the Peddie School. He received his A. B. from Brown University in 1925.

He then studied at Oxford as a Rhodes scholar and was awarded and A. B. from that university in 1928 and a M. A. in 1934. Dr. Chalmers holds a M. A. and a Ph.D. from Harvard University, both awarded in 1933. Hobart College bestowed upon Dr. Chalmers the degree of Doctor of Laws at its 1938 commencement.

BUJC TO RECEIVE MUSICAL GIFT FROM CARNEGIE CORPORATION

Bucknell University Junior College, received notification from the Carnegie Corporation of New York City, that it had been selected as one of the fifteen colleges in the United States to receive a specially manufactured phonograph set with a collection of over 1,000 records of outstanding reproductions of famous musicians.

Dr. Eugene Farley, said this morning that the modern designed machine is at present being assembled in New York and will be shipped to Wilkes-Barre in the Fall. More than 400 universities throughout the United States applied for the phonographs awarded by the Carnegie Corporation.

Selection of the Junior College as one of the institutions to merit the award was undoubtedly influenced by the world wide publicity Wilkes-Barre and Bucknell received from the Bach Festival, conducted here each year by Prof. Paul Gies, instructor of music at Bucknell. Other musical fetes, such as the Wilkes-Barre-Scranton Sinfonietta, have added to Wilkes-Barre's fame as a musical center.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE. . .

In a recent edition of a Berlin paper Germany defined her doctrine in stating that Europe's affairs were to be regulated in a European manner and not according to any American interpretations. This came following the statement of President Roosevelt on the German invasion of Norway.

The statement is perfectly sane and should meet with our approval—we have no business interfering in European affairs. We are away from Europe, we have no contact with internal political questions and if we are to maintain our neutrality this is as we must remain. Europe, throughout the years, has shown a high regard for our Monroe Doctrine and if we maintain a strict neutrality, she will continue to show this regard. It is useless to say that Europe respects America because she fears America—she respects America only because we mind our own business and once we cease doing this we shall feel the venom of disrespect.

It is only natural from time to time that irritating incidents should arise due to the undiplomatic conduct of certain individuals or the force of radical citizens but these incidents have always been adjusted to our satisfaction.

There are those who feel that we should have a more vital interest in the European conflict because of the great financial gain it would bring to us, but far greater is the financial loss brought by strict neutrality. This loss will be far less in terms of American dollars than the cost of going to war if we violate neutrality by seeking business. Wise heads a few years ago gained for us a blessing that we enjoy today in refusing to ratify the Versailles Treaty and accepting a membership in the League of Nations. Our hands are clean and we are free of foreign contacts. Just as long as we remain this way, just so long will they keep from us. Once we violate our neutrality and show allegiance in terms of national action, we need only await a declaration of war.

NEUTRAL RIGHTS. . .

President Roosevelt in his remarks over the radio the other night said that he was glad that here in America we can still be shocked by such vicious assaults upon neutral nations as Hitler's invasion of the low countries. It might surprise many Americans to think that there was any reason for gratification at the feeling of shock. The President meant that in a world which is rapidly beginning to take such brigandage among nations for granted, there are still a few nations which have enough moral sensibility to feel outraged.

The dictator nations justify their attitude on the ground that other nations "got theirs" a long time ago and are only interested in maintaining the status quo. The argument brings us back to the fact that it is possible to justify any act of vandalism or violence if we go back far enough in history to look for a similar act.

During the past century the world had made great progress in learning to accord a new kind of respect to the right of neutrals until Hitler knocked it all into a cocked hat with his new doctrine.

Prior to the middle of the last century little thought was given to the rights of neutrals. When this nation was neutral in the Napoleonic wars both the French and the British ride over us rough shod if we got in their way. In those days the only kind of neutrality which counted was described by the phrase "armed neutrality."

For the better part of a century the new conception of neutral rights which came in at the end of the Napoleonic wars prevailed through Europe and generally through the world and generally came to be accepted as sound and a contribution to civilization. Then came Germany's invasion of Belgium in 1914, a ruthless overthrow of the doctrine of neutrality, to be followed 26 years later by Hitler's even more violent demonstration.

In brief Hitler has plunged the world back a full century in its conception of neutral rights. The President of the United States is glad that some of the world, at least, refuses to be plunged.

Hanging in the Social Room of the Wilkes-Barre Y.M.C.A. is a group of photographs of extraordinary quality and human interest. These pictures have come from all over the United States, and many of them from such remote places as Hong Kong, China and Budapest, Hungary. The exhibition of these pictures is sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. Camera Club, and judges for the exhibition are Mr. Alfred A. De Lardi, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania; Mr. Niccolo Cortiglia, Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania; and Mr. Frederick Hurd, Narbeth, Pennsylvania.

Notable among those pictures being shown is one called "The Wanderer," submitted by Professor William H. Schuyler. It is significant to note that seventy-five percent of all those photographs submitted were rejected and that, therefore, the pictures selected are, so to speak, the cream of the crop. Professor Schuyler is to be commended for his excellent work which makes his picture one of the selected few. The photograph is a beautiful study of a country road winding beneath towering trees and topped by a magnificent bank of fleecy clouds. On the road is a small solitary figure from which the photograph takes its name, "The Wanderer." It was taken on Professor Gies' farm in the Pocono Mountains. A verbal description of the picture can, however, hardly suffice; the picture must be seen to be appreciated.

Exhibits During
Three-Day Show

By Robert Paxson

The past week-end in Conyngham Hall of Bucknell University Junior College, the Engineering and Camera Clubs of the college presented a series of exhibitions and demonstrations dealing with photography, chemistry, physics and engineering. Juniors and seniors in high school and parents and friends were in attendance at the three-day exhibit.

Work for the show was in charge of Dave Secunda and Joe Shinal, presidents of the Engineering and Camera Clubs respectively, and Professors Voris B. Hall and William H. Schuyler. Members of the two clubs conducted the numerous demonstrations and offered explanations of the displays.

Some of the items which were found in the chemistry laboratory included electro-plating, chemical rainbow, a complete display of cosmetics, indicators and a display of different kinds of glass. Demonstrations included the making of soap, mirrors, and artificial silk. Ace Hoffman Studios' dark room, showed the process of actual enlarging and contact printing. Exhibits pictured the improvement of photography and photo equipment.

In the physics laboratory the operation of a 110 volt light with but 4 volts. Among other demonstrations and exhibitions were non-glare headlights, the forming of ice in boiling water, and visible speech.

THESPIANS OF BUJC SCORE AGAIN WITH PRESENTATION OF 'HEDDA GABLER'

IBSEN'S DRAMA WINS PRAISE OF STUDENTS AND MANY PLAYGOERS

Misses Williams, Fenton Applauded for Excellent Characterizations

By Marion Waters

From the opinions of students and of the faculty, the play, "Hedda Gabler", presented by the Thespians, May 3, 4, 5, was an overwhelming success. Those who saw the character of Hedda played by both Miss Newbold Williams and by Miss Betty Fenton were amazed to see the contrasts and companions in the interpretations of this deceitful, conceited woman. The acting was excellent and very convincing. Each actor and actress seemed as though he actually lived his role in the play.

The effective scenery and lighting did a great deal to create the atmosphere aroused by the action of the drama. Although many thought that the drama itself was too deep to be enacted by college students. They thought the students did remarkably well. It seemed quite peculiar to many members of the faculty and student body to see such sophisticated parts played by such young people. To many, the action of the beginning of the drama was rather dull and tiresome, but as the play proceeded, the action increased to a horrible climax, anticipated by everyone.

The play itself was well written and directed. It was typically Ibsen with its plot interwoven with domestic and marital conflicts presented as usual without the author tampering with consequences of the force that he sets into operation. In the last analysis, the play certainly portrayed excellently the influence of a distorted personality on wrecking the lives of all those with whom she came in contact.

In the latter part of this semester, the Thespians arranged a series of walking rehearsal plays, in which the lines are not memorized but read from a paper.

The students and faculty hope that in the future the Thespians will continue to present plays that have a deeper significance rather than fanciful comedies.

CLASS PRESIDENT

Raymond Young

Members of next year's Sophomore class balloted a fortnight ago and elected Raymond Young as their leader in 1940-41. This is the second consecutive year that Ray has served as president of the class of '43.

Grier Carpenter was chosen vice-president and Bud Brown was selected for the secretary-treasurer post.

Jane Bergh and Tommy Brislin were female and male choices for seats on the Student Council. The election of these two candidates and the retainment of the present delegates in the Student Council marks the application of the amended ruling in the Student Constitution, which was favored by a three to one vote at a recent chapel election.
